A.J.C. Experts Report Arab League Massive Campaign Of New Scope Against Jews, Hitler Type

Anti-Semitic literature by the Arab League has been on the increase to an alarming degree in Europe and Latin America, officials of the American Jewish Committee reported in New York. The barrage of well financed propaganda goes far beyond political opposition to the State of Israel, says the New York Herald Tribune. It resembles, and includes the classic libels against Jews reminiscent of Hitler's day. It threatens commercial firms which attempt to trade with Israel.

And one of its major targets in a religious statement — the proposed declaration on the relation between Jews and Roman Catholics which is slated for consideration when the third session of the Second Vatican (Ecumenical) Council begins next September 14.

Two ranking leaders of the American Jewish Committee, human relations agency, described the impact and scope of the campaign in interviews with the New York Herald Tribune in connection with the organization's annual meeting at the Hilton Hotel.

According to Zachariah Shuster, of Paris, director for Europe and North Africa, and Abraham Monk, of Buenos Aires, and head of its Latin - American office the anti-Jewish smear campaign has attained a new scope and is found in areas "entirely unrelated" to the immediate tensions between Israel and the Arab states.

Mr. Shuster said his office is "constantly" receiving reports of threats against Jewish and non-Jewish business leaders in France, Belgium, Switzerland, and Germany to the effect that if they do business with Israel, firms in Arab countries will sever relations with them.

The Arab League's newest strategy, however, is "straight-forward anti-Semitism" for which "thousands of Arab students", studying in European countries, are channels for distribution. Six thousand of them in Germany recently have been the means of propagating a vicious anti-Semitic pamphlet defending Hitler and blaming Zionists for the start of World War II.

Synagogue With Some Of Most Influential British Jews Breaks With Chief Rabbi; Chooses Modernist Leader

Dr. Israel Brodie, the British Chief Rabbi, broke his silence on the controversy which split the London Jewish community after his refusal to authorize the appointment of Dr. Louis Jacobs as minister of the New West End Synagogue. Dr. Brodie told a meeting in London of 150 rabbis and ministers of the Anglo-Jewish community that "fundamental questions have been raised which affect all of us," says the London Times. He continued:

"In the present controversy I and the leaders of the United Synagogue followed the fitting Jewish practice of keeping any domestic differences, within the confines of the community, and have not sought to air our views in the national press or on radio and TV.

"However, as it is being said that our silence in the face of all this publicity might not serve the best interests of our community, I have decided to take this opportunity of making a statement before the spiritual leaders of Anglo-Jewry and at the same time to correct some of the misleading statements that have been made."

In the case of Dr. Jacobs, the Chief Rabbi said, he did give reason for his decision in his letter to the secretary of the United Synagogue. It was with the deepest regret that he was compelled because of the views of Dr. Jacobs to state that he could not grant him certificate.

His decision in January had led to a new controversy, a conflict which, regrettably and irresponsibly, certain elements had brought before the wider community through the press and the radio, no doubt in the belief that in this way pressure could be brought to bear on him and the honorary officers of the United Synagogue.

Explaining the history of the dispute, Dr. Brodie said irrelevant arguments and facile theories had been propounded which had tended to conceal the real issues.

He recalled that he allowed Dr. Jacobs to hold the position of minister to the New West End Synagogue from 1954 to 1959 and also agreed to his appointment as tutor and lecturer at Jews' College, notwithstanding views he had expressed which were not in keeping with Orthodox beliefs.

His support for Dr. Jacobs during this time was an act of faith, for he considered he was possessed of ability and potentialities. He considered it would be wrong to reject him before he had reached a final and fixed position and his views had become crystallized, says the London Times. "I deeply regret that my hopes for Dr. Jacobs have not been realized. Subsequent utterances have shown that Dr. Jacobs has travelled far from the accepted form of Judaism."

In view of Dr. Jacobs' most recent and verbal statements on Judaism it would be readily understood why he (Dr. Brodie) found himself unable to authorize his appointment as minister of the New West End Synagogue. Even a cursory examination of these views revealed how incompatible they were with the most fundamental principles of Judaism.

Dr. Brodie continued "It has been said that the decision I made was made under duress, exerted by 'German' or 'Continental', certainly un-British influences.

"These influences are said to be embodied in the persons of rabbis and others described as 'fanatical', 'obscurantist', and 'intolerant'. I think it most reprehensible to divide the Anglo-Jewish community into those with English and those with foreign attitudes to Judaism."

Dr. Brodie said it had been apparent to him that there was much more involved in the present controversy than the pulpit of one synagogue. He added:

"Regrettably everything points to the fact that Dr. Jacobs has been used as a central figure by a few resolute individuals who have openly declared their intention of trying to bring about a new orientation in our community. As the spiritual leader of Anglo-Jewry, I know that the new trend is in conflict with basic Jewish belief and inimical to the spirit and sentiment in which our community has developed over the years."

He said he had been asked to reverse his decision, and for the sake of unity and community permit Dr. Jacobs to be within the framework of the United Synagogue. He had made his decision with a heavy heart but in all conscience.

A group had decided on establishing an independent synagogue outside the jurisdiction of the Chief Rabbinate and had appointed Dr. Jacobs its spiritual leader. All this, he said, it had been much advised into should he accepted, says the London Times.

There was prolonged applause for the Chief Rabbi as he finished his 75-minute address.

A [illegible] meeting of the [illegible] view that the laws of the Torah are of divine origin. This view has been challenged by Dr. Louis Jacobs, a 43-year-old Orthodox rabbi and leader of the congregation that broke away, says the New York Times. Dr. Jacobs on the basis of modern scholarship and archeological discovery, maintains that the Torah contains a human as well as a divine element.

In his writings he has accused the Chief Rabbi and other Orthodox leaders of "trying to put the clock back." The Torah, the first five books of the Bible, is the cornerstone of the beliefs of Orthodox Judaism.

Dr. Brodie, Chief Rabbi of Britain and the Commonwealth, appeared to rule out a compromise with Dr. Jacobs and his followers, who include many students and younger professional people in Britain's Jewish community.

The meeting was closed to the press. But mimeographed copies of the Chief Rabbi's speech were issued outside the meeting place, the Adolph Tuck Hall, part of a Jewish communal center in Bloomsbury near the British Museum.

A prominent provincial religious leader said after the session:

"The vast majority came to show their loyalty, although they disagreed somewhat with the way the thing has been handled and the fact that a peace formula hasn't been found so far." There was no formal discussion at the meeting. It was taken up entirely by the Chief Rabbi's speech.

The Rabbinical Council of America, an Orthodox group, sent a message to the Chief Rabbi saying: "We support you fully. You may call on us for help."

In asserting that the "laws of the Torah are of divine origin with binding authority on all who are sons of the covenant," reports the New York Times. Dr. Brodie de-

West German P[illegible] Judge Says Nazi War Crimes Trials Are "Vitally Necessary"; Sentences Ghetto Scourge To Life In Prison 22 Times Over

The one-time Gestapo overlord of a Polish ghetto was sentenced at Bochum, Germany, to the heaviest penalty ever imposed by a West German war crimes court: life in prison 22 times over. Gray-haired Hermann Blache, now 63, was convicted of gunning down 22 Jews in Tarnow, which was under his command during the Nazi occupation of World War II, reports the New York Herald Tribune. The life terms run concurrently, and the defendant was given a further six-year sentence for complicity in the massacre of some 4,000 more Tarnow Jews.

In a unique statement, Presiding Judge Wilhelm Auffenheide admitted that before the three-week trial began he had been one of the many Germans who "wish to draw a line through the past" and forget the Nazi era.

"But studying the documents and history of this trial overcame my earlier scruples," the chief Judge went on. "Such trials are vitally necessary."

The "gruesome, detailed" testimony against Blache "proved beyond doubt that he killed with malice, even without orders to kill, of his own volition," Dr. Auffenheide declared.

He also rebuked Germans "who complain that only German war crimes and not the crimes of other people are called to account. [illegible] be [illegible] justice cannot allow such crimes to go unpunished on this account."

War crimes trials have a positive side, too, the judge added, for they show that "neither the German people in its entirety nor the German soldier" can be blamed for the whole catalogue of Nazi atrocities.

West German Chancellor Erhard made a similar point in a talk with West Berlin high school students when one asked why such trials are necessary so many years after the war.

"We do not want a witch hunt of people merely because they belonged to a Nazi organization," Dr. Erhard replied, says the New York Herald Tribune. "But we must make a clear distinction between those Nazis who committed crimes and those who did not."

There is no death penalty in West Germany.

It was the 19th anniversary of Hitler's suicide as the Soviet Army closed in on his bunker in Berlin. Nowhere in either West or East Germany was there any official ceremony to mark the event.

The life sentence imposed on Blache was one of the few for ex-Nazis since the Nuernberg trials conducted by the Allies after World War II. When he heard the nine-judge tribunal's verdict, the old man — under arrest since 1961 — only shook his head and mumbled inaudibly.

He had denied all the charges against him even while boasting that he was "lord of life and death" as Gestapo commander of Tarnow. But survivors of the ghetto — from the United States, Israel, and elsewhere — testified that he had trampled children to death, used Jews for target practice, and burned one old woman alive.

In addition to his prison sentences at hard labor, Blache was stripped of high rights as a German citizen. His attorney — who had asked clemency on the ground that the defendant was an unlettered farm laborer who should never have been put in charge of the ghetto — said he had not decided whether to appeal.

An American Jewish witness had clutched at his heart and collapsed after telling the war crimes court that Gestapo men shot his wife and father and smashed his two daughters to death against a wall. The witness, Joseph Berger, 49, of Brooklyn, was stretched on a courtroom bench by a doctor and his second wife, says the New York Herald Tribune. After several minutes, Mr. Berger, a sales manager, recovered and resumed testifying.

On trial was Hermann Blache, 63, a steelworker, who was accused of the killing of 6,110 Jews as Gestapo boss of the ghetto in Tarnow, Poland. Mr. Berger testified that the slaying of his family occurred when the "Gestapo made one of their sweeps" through the Tarnow ghetto in 1942. The area later was turned into a giant camp ringed with barbed wire under the control of Blache, who also personally killed inmates, Mr. Berger said.

"I saw you shoot women and children. It was in the big evacuation in 1943 . . . they were dragged out of the wagons . . . and you shot them," he [illegible] to the small [illegible]

"I know [illegible] Gestapo [illegible] everything, [illegible] shouted, jumping up.

But Mr. Berger's present wife, Miriam, 49, another survivor of the ghetto, tesified, "I felt your brutality on my own body. Whenever you were loose in the ghetto, the Jewish watchmen would tell us, 'Hide — Blache is around,'" she said. Once she got the warning too late, she added, and:

"Blache grabbed me and yelled, 'where do you work?' I was too frightened to answer. He beat me with a club till I lost consciousness."

Blache came to his feet again, shouting, "It wasn't me." A ripple of mocking laughter sounded from the spectators.

Two former top assistants of Adolf Eichmann went on trial at Frankfurt charged with the deportation of 437,000 Hungarian Jews, most of whom ended up in the gas chambers of Auschwitz, reports the New York Herald Tribune. Both of the defendants, Hermann Krumey and Otto Hunsche, who are formally accused of murder and extortion, complained to the court that their jail cells were uncomfortable.

Hunsche, 52, a Nazi lawyer on Eichmann's staff who worked with the Hungarian government of Admiral Miklos Horthy to provide a legal basis for the deportation of the nation's Jews, also complained that having so many policemen guarding him was making him nervous.

"You can't imagine how big a strain this is on the nerves to have all these guards around me," he said in a quavering voice.

Krumey, 59, a former lieutenant colonel in the SS (Elite Guard), is also accused of having played a leading role with Eichmann in the Nazi offer to the Western allies in 1944 to exchange the lives of Manuel I. Zive, 6484 Waegwoltic Avenue, Halifax, N. S., honourary president of Beth Israel Synagogue, was honoured at a testimonial dinner for humanitarian services. Over three hundred and fifty guests were present. The announcement that he is to be a recipient of an honourary Doctor of Laws degree at Saint Mary's convocation exercises on May 4, was made on behalf of the University by Mr. Justice L. D. Currie, who also commented on the fact that this was the first time in the history of the University that such an honour has been bestowed on a Jewish person. He said that in his opinion Mr. Zive was "Number One Citizen of the City of Halifax." Dr. J. H. Greenblatt, 926 Greenwood Avenue, president of Baron de Hirsch Synagogue, from which he brought official greetings, said that the community was proud to be able to tender such a dinner to Mr. Zive. An oil painting of Mr. Zive, by H. Schlossberg, was presented to him on behalf of the Synagogue members, by E. Bowman, 1061 Bellevue Avenue, vice-president; and a plaque inscribed for the occasion was also presented. It will be placed in the lower lobby of the Synagogue. Mr. Zive thanked the guests. He said that it was a wonderful thing that in his lifetime he could look around his gathered friends and note that for the first time in the history of the synagogue there Jew and non-Jew alike had gathered together to break bread with him. Dr. I. K. Lubetsky, 6621 First Street, was convener, and made the closing remarks.

Halifax Women's ORT sponsored a fashion show in aid of projects. Conveners were: Mesdames I. Webber, 2281 Armcrescent West, president; Frank Zebberman, 940 Robie Street; Sanford Berrens; Peter Cohn, 84 Willow Street; Joel Rotenberg; and Saul Garson, 100 Isleville Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Vinegar, of Perth, N.B., visited her father, M. Fine, and her brother-in-law, and sister, Mr. and Mrs. David Lubin, all of Saint John, N.B.

Mrs. Charles Vaughan, wife of the Mayor of Halifax, officially opened the Spring Fair, at Beth Israel Synagogue, the major money-raising project of the Sisterhood. Conveners were: Mesdames E. Bowman, A. Hoffman, A. Rubin, E. Fineberg; L. Roza, H. Moss, commercial booths managers; S. Garson, secretary; A. LeVine, treasurer; J. Greenblatt, L. Zwerling, J. Newman, B. Sheffman, booth management; I. Yanofsky, baked goods booths; R. Wolman, E. Woolman, sewing; J. Newman, S. Schlossberg, variety booths; O. Chelekower, attic treasures; D. Jacobson, L. Aronson, jewellery booths; H. Newman, D. Aaron, beauty bar; M. B. Fineberg, plant booth; R. Sadosky, gift shop; M. Weiner, W. Marcus, refreshments; M. Mosher, W. Weiner, grocery booths; L. Goldfarb, I. Zwicker, S. Aaron, S. Ottman, J. Lief, raffles; A. Zive, admission; A. Aaron, H. Gordon, baked goods money; R. Medjuck, collections; R. Garson, H. Hopowich, M. Burstein, in charge of the children. Mrs. B. Zemel is president.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Issie Farber (nee Sandra Litwin, formerly of Campbellton, N.B.), 300 St. Aubin Street, Montreal, Quebec, on April 11, at the Royal Victoria Hospital, a daughter, Rachelle Robin Taryn; granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Litwin, of Campbellton; and of Max Farber, of Montreal, and the late Mrs. Rachel Farber.

SYNAGOGUE WITH SOME OF MOST INFLUENTIAL BRITISH JEWS BREAKS WITH CHIEF RABBI; CHOOSES MODERNIST LEADER

plored the present situation when "we who hold to the validity of the Torah are called backward, stagnant, medieval, and fundamentalist."

He said such a description is a "distortion of Orthodox Jews who include many pure scientists of note, as well as philosophers, intellects, Biblical, and Talmudic scholars, authors of literary renown in Israel, in this country, in Europe, and America."

The 69-year-old Chief Rabbi emphasized that once the Torah was undermined, "Jewish life and tradition weakens and withers, and the way is open for the disappearance of the Jewish identity through mixed marriage and other forms of assimilation."

Dr. Brodie then went into the reasons why he refused to authorize Dr. Jacobs' reappointment as rabbi of the New West End Synagogue of the Bayswater section of London where he had served from 1954 to 1959.

This action touched off the dispute, although it had been in the making for the last several years. A sizable proportion of the New West End congregation has just set up an independent synagogue with Dr. Jacobs as rabbi. The congregation which includes some of Britain's most influential Jews severed ties with the country's Chief Rabbi.

The Chief Rabbi said that by repeating the "well-known thesis that parts of the Torah are not divine but are man-made" and maintaining that "reason alone should be the final judge as to what portion of the Torah may be selected as divine," Dr. Jacobs "has travelled far from the accepted norms of Judaism."

With such views, he said, "It would be incongruous for him to occupy the pulpit of an Orthodox synagogue." Dr. Jacobs had no comment on the Chief Rabbi's remarks, reports the New York Times. Dr. Jacobs, who has questioned some traditional Jewish beliefs, entered the pulpit, on April 18 and on April 23 the board was deposed by the council of the parent body, the United Synagogue.

This body controls seventy-nine Orthodox synagogues in the Greater London area and is in turn under the authority of the Chief Rabbi.

The emergency meeting was called by the deposed board to determine the opinion of the synagogue's 700 members on severing ties with the parent organization.

Of 350 at the meeting, only eleven voted against the resolution to establish an independent synagogue. But members at the same time affirmed their intention to work for the return of the United Synagogue "to its own traditions of tolerance" and 'progressive Conservatism."

Dr. Jacobs, who has said that the Chief Rabbi dislikes his acceptance of the findings of modern Biblical scholarship, attended the meeting, says the New York Times. He told the congregation: "Heaven help us if we are to surrender the right of traditional Jews to learn from new knowledge, to reinterpret their faith and understand it as a great quest as well as a great truth given once and for all."

"Through no fault of ours," he said, "and through no virtue of ours, the eyes of the Jewish world are on us in our deliberations. Our debate is part of a wider debate which is going on all over the Jewish world today. Is Judaism to be understood in static terms or in dynamic terms?

"We have come out openly in favor of reinterpretation. Had it not been for this reinterpretation we would not have been here today to discuss its legitimacy."

Fundamentalists have been shocked by some of Dr. Jacob's views, although he makes no break with fundamental Jewish observances. He believes fundamental writings should be reinterpreted in the light of modern scholarship and archeological discoveries.

Dr. Jacobs was Rabbi of the New West End synagogues between 1954 and 1960, when he left to become a tutor at Jews College, London.

On his failure to be appointed principal of the College two years later, he wanted to return to the synagogue, says the New York Times, but Dr. Brodie, who had blocked his appointment as principal, refused to grant him a certificate of reappointment to the synagogue.

The deposed board of management of the New West End Synagogue, won the right to "negotiate from strength" to settle their differences with the Jewish religious leadership in London, says the London Times.

At the emergency meeting about half of the 700 members of the congregation voted to establish — if necessary —a "breakaway" or "independent" congregation with the name of the New London Synagogue. Only eleven voted against. From the 90-minute discussion it was clear that most of these only wanted more negotiations before such drastic action was taken.

The synagogue's board of management were deposed ten days ago by the council of the United Synagogue, which governs some eighty synagogues in the greater London area, after they had insisted that Dr. Louis Jacobs be their minister.

He is well known for his wish to have the scriptures regarded in the light of modern knowledge and this has offended the strictly Orthodox section of the faith, who look on his interpretations as tending to "detract from the word of God". This substantial section, with the support of Dr. Brodie, Chief Rabbi, succeeded in having Dr. Jacobs's appointment vetoed.

Dr. Jacobs said at the meeting that everything possible had been done for reconciliation. But the time had come when men of honour and self-respect must ask themselves if they should not go ahead to develop their own ideas in their own way.

"Heaven help us if we are to surrender the right of traditional Jews to learn from new knowledge", he added, says the London Times. Ewen Montagu, Q.C., chairman of Middlesex Sessions, said Dr. Brodie was "an unhappy and worried man. I am sure if he had been given a free hand this controversy would not have arisen."

Apart from the minority, who wanted more time to think, speaker after speaker voiced support for Dr. Jacobs.

Yet the feeling even among the most militant was best expressed by H. A. Leon, of the board of management, who appealed to Dr. Brodie to see Dr. Jacobs privately. "It is not impossible for these two eminent scholars to resolve their differences", he said.

From conservation after the meeting it was plain that the majority hoped their action would prove to be no more than another manoeuvre in the negotiations with the Chief Rabbi and the United Synagogue council. Many of the congregation have long family ties with the New West End Synagogue — some travel long distances to attend — and felt it would be a sad day if those ties had to be broken. But it was also clear that this break will be made absolute if necessary, says the London Times. A. H. Silverman, secretary of the United Synagogue, said they had no comment to make.

WEST GERMAN PRESIDING JUDGE SAYS NAZI WAR CRIMES TRIALS ARE "VITALLY NECESSARY"

one million Hungarian Jews for 10,000 trucks.

The trial of the two, known as the Hungary Case, has been in preparation since 1954. Eichmann, the former head of the Gestapo's Jewish extermination department, would have been the chief defendant, had he not been convicted of war crimes in Israel in May, 1962, and executed the next year.

The trial is taking place in the same Frankfurt courtroom as the proceedings against 22 former guards and officials of the Auschwitz death camp. The two trials share the courtroom alternately.

A plea that Hunsche was being subjected to double jeopardy because he had been sentenced to a period of detention by a de-Nazification board in 1947 was rejected, says the New York Herald Tribune. Both defendants have been in pre-trial confinement since 1960, except for two months last year when Hunsche was freed on bail.

Hermann Krumey, the former lieutenant colonel of the SS Elite Guard, who was Adolf Eichmann's deputy in the extermination of 430,000 Hungarian Jews, contended in tears that he had not harmed any of them, says the New York Times. Weeping with self-pity, Krumey told the court that, apart from "minor administrative tasks," his main activities were aimed at the improvement of living conditions in Nazi concentration camps.

"I feel innocent of these crimes," he said. "All I knew at the time was that Jews were deported to labor camps."

"And you never faltered in this belief?" The court president asked him.

"No," Krumey replied. He admitted minutes later that Eichmann, hanged in Israel in 1962, did cause doubts in his mind during a conversation in the spring of 1944. To a question about reports that Jewish deportees were gassed in Auschwitz, Eichmann had curtly replied: "And what if it were so?"

The 162-page indictment, resulting from investigations that lasted eight years, details the way in which the Nazis set about to accomplish a final solution of "the Jewish question".

Krumey is charged with having taken part in the extortion of large sums of money from Jews with the promise that their deportation orders would be canceled. In Budapest alone, the indictment charges, the SS obtained the equivalent of $1,000 each from 1,700 Jews. Instead of sending them to Auschwitz, the Nazis then sent the victims to the Bergen-Belsen camp, where Krumey is said to have extorted more money, gold, and other valuables before sending two transports into Switzerland.

A similar tale was told by Otto Hunsche, Krumey's companion in the dock, who was Eichmann's legal expert. Like Krumey, he is indicted not only for the deportation to death of Hungary's Jews but also for exacting huge ransom from desperate victims.

"I once asked Eichmann whether the Auschwitz labor camp was big enough to accommodate so many Jews," Hunsche said. "Didn't you know that this is Germany's largest armament center, with huge underground factories!" he quoted Eichmann as having replied.

Hunsche said it was completely wrong to assume that Eichmann had gone to Hungary under specific orders to round up the Jews for liquidation, says the New York Times. "Our special task force was part of the army, sent into Hungary by Hitler to prevent the country's imminent surrender to the allies," he said.

Hunsche asserted that Eichmann's job, within this preventive measure, was to eliminate what Hitler considered the "defeatist Jewish influence" on the then Hungarian Government, led by Admiral Horthy.

In this detailed account of his life, which took up most of a day's session, Krumey said he was made an SS lieutenant colonel as early as 1938 in reward for his subversive activities against the republic of Czechoslovakia.

He said he joined an anti-Slav nationalist youth movement in 1916 in his home town of Mach-risch-Schonberg.

After the establishment of the Czech republic he became a druggish and used his spare time organizing pro-Nazi chapters among the German minority. These chapters were incorporated in the SS after the destruction of the Czechoslovak state by Hitler in 1938.

After the German conquest of Poland in 1939 he said he was posted in Lods as head of a "resettlement bureau" to settle Germans in the Lods area as the Polish population was moved farther east. He denied that he had ever ordered the deportation of Poles into extermination camps.

He said his collaboration with Eichmann was limited to the period from March to June 1944. During that period most of the 437,000 Hungarian Jews were sent to Auschwitz, where 300,000 of them were gassed upon arrival, says the New York Times. The defendant said he spent the rest of the war in Vienna, "where I did what I could to alleviate the lot of the Jews in nearby Internment camps."

West Germany, which lately has been having trouble keeping its accused war criminals alive and in jail, lost a convicted one, says the New York Herald Tribune, but quickly arrested one of the escaped man's jailers and said he had confessed complicity in the breakout.

Hans-Walter Zech-Nenntwich, a 47-year-old former first lieutenant in Hitler's SS (Elite Guard), escaped from a Braunschweig jail. Apparently with the help of the bribed guard, he got through six locked doors and over the jail's 15-foot wall.

Zech-Nenntwich had been convicted of complicity in the massacre of 5,264 Jews at Pinsk — then part of Poland — in August, 1941. The prosecutor in the two-month trial said his four-year sentence was too light and planned to appeal it along with the tribunal's decision to acquit one of his four co-defendants.

Lower Saxony Prosecutor Heinrich Kintzi described Zech-Nenntwich's escape as "neat and clean." The bars on his solitary cell window were untouched and the new locks on the doors he had to go through had apparently not been tampered with.

One of the accomplices, 48-year-old jail guard Hans Zeeman, is a Nazi comrade of the escaped prisoner as long ago as 1936, according to the Justice Ministry in the West German state of Lower Saxony.

In Frankfurt, where more Nazis are on trial for war crimes at the Auschwitz death camp in Poland, the deputy prosecutor for the state of Hesse said the government is "working on the assumption some kind of Nazi underground exists" to help accused war criminals cheat justice.

Officials would not name the arrested jail overseer, but they said the search for the escaped prisoner was focused on routes leading to Switzerland, says the New York Herald Tribune. Zech-Nenntwich used to operate an industrial film company in Basel and may have left a cache of money there, they thought.

A hunt was also on for Margit (Little Angel) Steinheuer, the escaped man's 32-year-old companion who was missing from her rented room in Braunschweig.

It was not the first jailbreak for Zech-Nenntwich. In 1943 he escaped from an SS jail in Warsaw, where he was awaiting trial for desertion. He got on a troopship with forged papers, was put ashore in neutral Sweden after feigning appendicitis and finally made his way to Britain.

He joined the British Secret Service and made anti-Nazi broadcasts before returning to Germany as an official of the British military government.

Later Zech-Nenntwich went into business for himself, and in 1962 he was sentenced to three months in jail for trying to bribe a civilian guard who had caught him rifling papers in a military purchasing office, trying to get a line on competitors' bids.

Since then his auto parts business in Remagen has apparently prospered, although Lower Saxony officials said he had seemed depressed about some unpaid debts.

Special measures had been taken to prevent his escape, they added.

The officials also denied that there was reason to believe the breakout was planned with the help of Nazi sympathizers. They leaned toward the view that Zech-Nenntwich simply bribed his way out.

Nevertheless, the escape was the latest in a series of incidents involving accused or convicted West German war criminals. Earlier this year, the head of Chancellor Erhard's personal bodyguard, Ewald Peters, hanged himself in his cell rather than face the war crimes charges against him.

And of the four defendants originally charged with killing handicapped prisoners in a trial now going on at Limburg, only one — Dr. Hans Hefelmann — is still in custody, says the New York Herald Tribune. Of the others, Gerhard Bohne fled last summer, apparently to Argentina; Friedrich Tillman plunged to his death from a Cologne office building six days before the start of the trial; Dr. Werner Heyde hanged himself in his jail cell the following day.

Ulrich Krueger, the Hesse deputy prosecutor who raised the question of a "Nazi "underground", said the Zech-Nenntwich escape could be its latest exploit. He said there was clear proof that such prisoners could not escape without "experienced, organized assistance from a group operating clandestinely."

The "underground," he said, must provide the money, false papers, hideouts, and transportation that have enabled ex-Nazis to flee West German and find refuge "in Spain and several countries of South America and Africa."

Hesse's chief prosecutor, Fritz Bauer, voiced his similar suspicions earlier this year, hinting of a "conspiracy to cheat justice." Zech-Nenntwich is the first convicted war criminal to get away, however.

Reinhold Vorberg escaped to Spain before he could be questioned about his part in the Nazis' plan to liquidate the crippled, says the New York Herald Tribune. He was finally extradited last year and is now under pretrial arrest.

Sightseeing with guide. In each city, KLM will take you on a comprehensive sightseeing trip. Most of these tours last about 3 hours. In Amsterdam (above), KLM gives you a coach tour and a boat-trip along the canals. For full details, clip coupon.

Comfortable Hotels. The hotels you stay in are not the fanciest in Europe, but each is clean and respectable. You may stay in a brand-new hotel in Athens (above), or a 14th-century palazzo in Florence.

London's Tower Bridge. One of the best known landmarks in London is the Tower Bridge over the Thames. England is packed with fascinating points of interest. Ask your Travel Agent to list the finest of them for you.

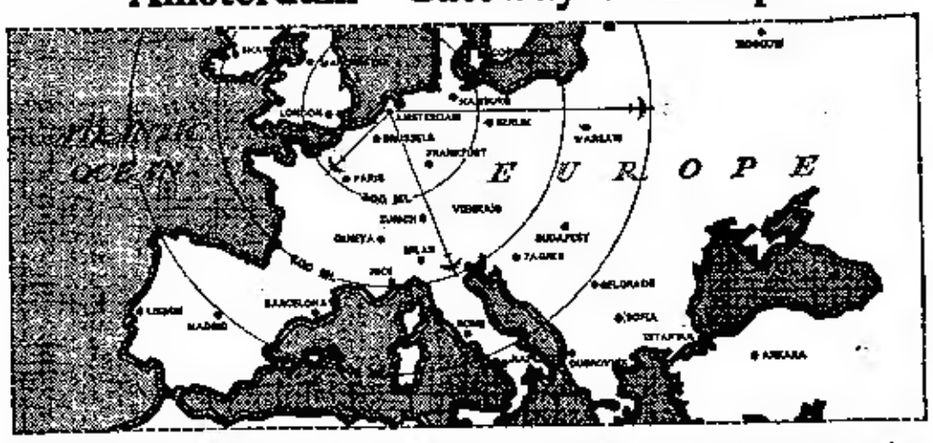
Let KLM show you Europe— for as little as $5 per day plus your air fare

With the introduction of the new, low air fares over the Atlantic, KLM now makes it possible for you to enjoy a European vacation for less than you may pay for a holiday in Canada or in the U.S. KLM has an intriguing budget-priced travel plan that enables you to tour Europe for as little as $5 per day. Get your Travel Agent to explain how this plan works. Then have him help you work out your own $5 a day European tour schedule.

Amsterdam—Gateway to Europe



KLM's $5 a day vacation plans can be made to include many of the cities shown in the above map. Amsterdam, KLM's home base, is a logical starting off point for any European tour. It is also a fascinating city in its own right.

1. Make Amsterdam your European Gateway. Whatever type of European vacation you are planning on, you'll find Amsterdam an ideal starting point. From Amsterdam Airport, during the Summer, you have a choice of about 12 flights every day to London, 6 to Paris, 4 to Hamburg and 10 per week to Rome. Paris is only an hour away. Rome, two hours and five minutes. Frankfurt, one hour.

2. See Amsterdam. Before starting out on your European tour, make a point of spending a few hours—better still, a few days—in Amsterdam. It is a fascinating city. Fifty canals divide it into seventy islands linked by 500 picturesque bridges. Forty museums house famous Rembrandts, Vermeers, Van Goghs, and many others. Cosmopolitan nightlife bustles the year round. The standard of living is high. The cost of living is low. And there are 6000 hotel rooms to choose from.

3. Plan to see the rest of Holland, too. Amsterdam is only a few hours' drive from the farthest corner of Holland. In 45 minutes you can be at the Alkmaar Cheese Market or Aalsmeer, the world's largest flower market. An hour puts you at the 18-mile-long dyke that stretches across the former Zuyder Zee. And Amsterdam Airport has one of the biggest tax-free shopping centers in Europe. You can buy 150 brands of liquor, Swiss watches, German cameras and French perfumes—often at less than half of what you pay in Canada. Amsterdam has the only airport in the world where you can buy a car tax-free and drive off within an hour.

4. "Europe on $5 A Day" and "Europe First Class—on a Budget!" These are two new KLM booklets that contain complete, detailed information on how you can see Europe for either $5 or $10 a day, everything found, excluding the price of your air fare. They give you facts about the cities you can visit, the hotels in which you stay. They also tell you exactly what you get for your $5 or $10. Whether you have already decided that this is your year to see Europe, or you are still just thinking about it, either way, you'll find these two booklets invaluable sources of travel information. Check coupon below for your free copies.

5. KLM Inclusive Tours are tailored to your own tastes. KLM Inclusive Tours are individual, low-cost package vacations linked to KLM's regularly-scheduled flights. Your Travel Agent can help individuals or groups plan Inclusive Tours to just about any country in the world and to suit any vacation requirement. KLM Inclusive Tour passengers receive the same outstanding service afforded all other travellers aboard KLM flights and, at destinations, they enjoy the same hotel service as all other visitors.

6. More than 3000 people look after KLM planes in Amsterdam alone. KLM's technical know-how is respected throughout the airline industry. More than 30 per cent of KLM's maintenance work is done for other airlines—a nice vote of confidence in KLM's engineering efficiency.

When KLM maintenance crews overhaul a DC-8 jet engine, they strip it down to two thousand parts. Every engine on a KLM DC-8 jet is changed every 25 weeks.

7. KLM's own multi-million jet workshop at Amsterdam International Airport has a tunnel for testing jet engines with up to 30,000 lbs. thrust. In these tunnels, closed-circuit television is used so that KLM engineers can study two engines simultaneously. KLM also uses a giant ultrasonic washing machine to cleanse every cavity in instrument parts. These parts are placed in a glass dome filled with cleaning fluid. 800,000 waves of energy shoot through the fluid every second, creating tiny bubble vacuums. The bubbles collapse and buffet the instrument part to sweep it clean of even the minutest microscopic dirt particles.

8. KLM has a dust-free workroom that is sealed by two air locks. Employees remove their shoes in one and put on special lint-free suits and hats in the other. The air in this dust-free workroom is constantly filtered. No dust particle bigger than five microns may enter. It would take 500 microns to cover the point of a pin!

KLM IN CANADA

KLM maintains 10 offices across Canada. KLM also has ticket offices in Quebec City, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Winnipeg, Edmonton, and Vancouver. KLM employs over a hundred-and-fifty highly-trained personnel in Canada—including technical, supervisory, and operational staff at Dorval Airport, and a team of experienced Cargo Sales Engineers operating out of Montreal and Toronto.

KLM's Air Cargo Department at Montreal Airport is staffed with experts who have had previous cargo experience with KLM in other countries. They know the local situation first hand. KLM has Canadian cargo customers that have been using KLM for more than 10 years. In several Canadian companies, KLM air cargo has, in fact, become a basic element in their business scheme. KLM's Cargo Customers' Service is highly recommended for its professional competence.

Much of the superbly-prepared food you enjoy on your KLM trans-Atlantic jet is purchased in Canada. KLM has its own Catering Supervisor at Dorval International Airport. In addition to overseeing the preparation of appetizing meals for each outgoing flight, an important part of his job is to ensure that each individual meal is up to KLM standards. KLM has been famous for the excellence of its cuisine for years.

KLM Passenger Meeting Service at Montreal and New York. When arriving in Montreal or New York to connect with your KLM flight to Europe, be sure to take advantage of KLM's special Passenger Meeting Service. A uniformed staff member will not only meet you and conduct you to the KLM departure point, he will also arrange for all your baggage transfers. Ask for KLM's Passenger Meeting Service when confirming your reservation.

KLM provides several jet services a week from Montreal to Europe. In mid-summer there will be no less than six flights a week to Amsterdam and back. Thinking of visiting the New York World Fair when going to Europe? Then remember: KLM also maintains several jet flights daily from New York.

Rely on your Travel Agent—he is an expert. Your Travel Agent will help you with all your travel arrangements. His experience enables him to tell you where and how you can make the very most of your time and money. He can also tell you about the advantages of flying KLM. YOUR TROUSSEAU AND HOW TO PLAN IT

By Eleanor Lambert and Diana Calloway, for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union — Copyright 1960. Reprinted by Permission

The Man In Your Life

You are planning to begin a new life, to be shared with a man you want to please in every way.

Your taste in dress and the way you wear your clothes are part of his mental picture of you. He may never be able to tell you what sort of dress you were wearing at any special time, but it is an indisputable fact that the way a woman looks makes a man proud of her, or just a little uncomfortable about her — perhaps never knowing exactly why.

What you buy now to wear as his wife should take into account his feeling about clothes. Most men have a definite idea of how they like a woman to look, and your future husband will be pleased to know you want to develop a "family taste" as well as to express your own. Perhaps he has already told you his favorite colors, whether he likes you best in casual sports clothes, or dressed in your prettiest party dress. If he hasn't talked about it, encourage him. Notice what he likes on others, too . . . not with resentment or jealously, but as a guide for yourself.

Almost all men, like women, absorb more about fashion than they are aware they do. The average man likes to feel that his wife knows fashion and is correctly dressed at all times. Whether he is the conservative or the adventurous style observer, he will probably enjoy participating in your wardrobe planning and his suggestions will very likely "pay off" in becomingness, practicality and suitability. Both of you, in a sense, will live with your clothes. You'll wear them, he'll look at them. But you have to make the final decision. If your ideas and his don't quite agree, compromise by choosing the colors he likes, in the shape, type and fabric you feel are best.

Some clothes have sure-fire man-appeal. Oddly enough, most of them are as essential to the well-planned wardrobe as meat and salad to the well-planned meal.

For instance:

The good tweed suit, in an attractive color and a classic easy cut.

The basic black dress with a pretty neckline and a neat waistline.

The good-looking topcoat, especially the belted trench coat type.

The sweater and skirt.

The costume with the touch of white — the suit with a fresh white blouse or dress with white collar and cuffs.

The graceful chiffon evening dress.

The slinky sheath dress — on the figure that can wear it.

Most men do not like:

Big, busy prints in either daytime or house dresses.

Wild color combinations such as purple and yellow, shocking and green.

Short skirts that ride up over your knees when you walk.

Embarrassingly low necklines.

Freakishly tall or wide hats.

Evening dresses that look like costumes with hoops, trains or panels that get stepped on.

Tight slacks or shorts on the street.

The Life You Will Lead

Where you will live and the kind of life you and your husband will lead are the two fundamentals on which your trousseau should unquestionably be planned.

Your status changes. You now have a dual role: you share his interests and activities and continue your own. Your wardrobe must reflect this and function well.

The City Wife

All large cities, from New York or San Francisco to Paris or Rome, have certain basic clothes requirements. To these, each city adds its own local and climatic variations. If you are moving to a strange city, save part of your trousseau money until you have lived for a few weeks in the new environment, then round out your wardrobe.

The clothes you are certain to need are:

A suit (dark for northern cities, light or colored for southern climates).

A heavy coat and a light topcoat.

An assortment of day and sports dresses.

Separates or knitted dresses.

For dining out or the theatre, a cocktail dress or jacket costume.

One or more hats. While you frequently see hatless women in even the largest cities, the well dressed woman always has some sort of head covering.

Even in a heat wave, a low-cut backless sun dress is not good taste on a crowded city street. Today most public places are air conditioned. Therefore, a jacket, stole, or small fur is almost essential in the evening for comfort as well as for cover on the street.

White shoes are seldom citified enough for street clothes. Better plan to wear dark shoes when you go downtown.

Young people nowadays seldom need long evening clothes. In cities where there are ultra-formal civic events such as Opera, Mardi Gras or large charity balls, long dresses are popular. The wives of diplomats and army officers are often required to dress with great formality and therefore, need long dresses. You can find out what type of clothes are worn in a city by studying the society pages of its newspapers. If you need formal clothes, buy a careful variety: a dinner dress with sleeves and a dramatic gala dress.

The Country Wife and The Suburban Wife

It is easy, with taste and judgment, to assemble a wardrobe that looks equally "right" in a city or small town, if your life takes you from one to the other. The suits, dresses, coats worn to churches, club meetings, and luncheons may be identical to those worn in the city, with perhaps a larger assortment of separates, shirtmaker dresses and dresses with matching sweaters.

In some rural and suburban parts of the country, the younger and slimmer (we hope) have taken as their year-round daytime uniform, bermuda shorts or tapered slacks with blouses and sweaters. Find out ahead if this attire is customary where you will live. If not, don't be the first to wear it. And no matter what: include shorts and slacks in your wardrobe plan only if you look extremely well in them; if not, wear a skirt or dress.

The sturdy "car coat" is useful if you are to be the family chauffeur.

Small communities where one sees the same people often, frequently require a larger wardrobe than the big cities where you may know many groups.

Climate and Local Custom Are Important In Any Trousseau Plan. Here Are Some Pointers On The Fashion Compass:

South

Southern women seldom dress in the fluffy Southern belle manner traditionally associated with them. They like to look pretty and know the value of pale colors and feminine touches, but they are intensely fashion conscious and enjoy dressing up, especially in the evening.

Everywhere in the South you will need a coat for winter. In resort cities, white or pastel coats are worn in mid-winter, but generally the South follows the same seasonal fashion cycle as the East, with of course, Summer being a much longer season.

Pastel tweeds are favored from January on. Light colored silk and cotton clothes are basics in the resort cities and in the whole of the South from April through September.

West

Because temperatures are more stable throughout the year, suits and light topcoats make up the bulk of a wardrobe. The cut of clothes is more casual. Coats should be lighter in weight but full enough to go easily over a suit.

In the Southwest there is a great deal of outdoor sports and outdoor entertaining, with a resulting need for active sports clothes, play clothes, spectator suits and dresses, and full-skirted patio or barbecue dresses for at-home parties.

In the Northwest it rains often. A good raincoat is a recommended investment.

North and East

Nine months of the year require a coat of some kind; it is wise to begin assembling coats that blend with all the colors in your wardrobe and give you good protection for very cold and moderate temperatures.

Wool suits, day dresses and separates should make up the bulk of your winter wardrobe.

The summers, though short, are apt to be very hot. Simple, lightweight day dresses in dark or cool colors look best on sweltering city streets.

How You Will Live Is As Important In Trousseau Planning As Where You Will Live

Be realistic about the answers to these questions:

What will your day-to-day life demand in clothes? Will you work or be a housewife?

The career trousseau will naturally stress street clothes. The housewife needs fewer street clothes but does need becoming clothes for housework, marketing, and daytime community activities.

Your Trousseau And How To Plan It

How much social life and what kind will your inclination and income permit?

If you expect your life to be home and community centered, your clothes needs will be different than if your favorite evening is "a night on the town."

As a couple, will you lead more of an outdoor life than a party life?

Buy lots of wonderful sports clothes and fewer party clothes.

What are the activities and income of your future husband's circle of friends?

You will marry each other "for richer or poorer." This may mean a change in status for you. Don't overdress if your husband's position and friends are simpler than your parents'. On the other hand, if you will be going "up" on the social-economic ladder, the right clothes will do a great deal to create a good impression. Take the trouble to make them right.

Are you and your husband-to-be homebodies?

Include at least one lounge or hostess costume.

What will you do weekends?

Be sure to consider clothes for any active sports in which you and your husband participate. If you live in a big city, you will need some country clothes for weekends.

Are you marrying a military man?

Make your trousseau compact, your living quarters are likely to be small.

Will you live on a college campus?

You will wear mostly sports clothes, but allow for at least one evening dress and one informal party dress.

Will you attend business conventions in a big city with your husband?

Your basic wardrobe, if it is good, will take you there and home again with success and well-being. A good quality day dress, a perfectly fitting suit with two pretty blouses, a becoming short party dress will accommodate any program unless a formal dinner or dance is announced in advance.

What Makes Up A Trousseau?

The word "trousseau" derives from the French word trousse, for bundle. Literally then, your trousseau is anything you carry with you to your new home.

The average bride thinks of her trousseau as her personal wardrobe of clothing, jewels and accessories — considered separate and apart from household items.

A frequent question asked by a prospective bride is how much clothing should she buy and how long should she expect it to last? If possible your trousseau, taking into consideration what you already have, should include one year's supply of outerwear and accessories; two years' supply of lingerie, negligees; and coats chosen to last for a number of years. For example:

2 suits — 1 casual, 1 dressy

6 daytime dresses — 3 for winter; 3 for summer

6 party dresses for afternoon, cocktail and informal evenings — 3 for winter, 3 for spring and summer

1 hostess gown or at-home costume

4 coats — 1 winter coat, 1 storm coat for heavy duty, 1 rain coat, 1 light topcoat

4 sweaters

2 skirts or 1 skirt and 1 bermuda shorts or slacks

6 blouses or shirts — 2 for each suit, 2 for sportswear

a shoe wardrobe and three dozen stockings

6 pairs gloves; 3 handbags — 2 for day, 1 for evening

1 bathrobe — 2 negligees or housecoats

6 bras — 3 dark, 3 light

4 girdles — 2 dark, 2 light

6 slips or half-slips — 2 tailored, 2 decorated, 2 dark

8 sleeping garments — 4 for winter; 4 for summer

Coats, suits, cocktail dresses, at-home clothes, sports clothes, shoes and bags should be considered long range investments. Be careful of quality and workmanship.

Watch yourself about impulse buying and "bargain hunting" or you'll find yourself with too many "bargains" and too few things you need.

Always keep a list of what you need, marked with what you have already bought.

Make sure you have one or two sturdy, comfortable "housework" outfits to save your good clothes when you are cleaning.

Keep something for sentiment — the dress you were wearing when you fell in love, any favorites of your husband-to-be.

The Wedding Dress

By far the majority of wedding dresses today are white, though off shades of white and delicate pastels are equally acceptable. The tradition of the white wedding dress was started in the Fifteenth Century when Princess Anne of Brittany chose white instead of the then traditional royal purple for her wedding to King Charles VIII of France.

Etiquette of the Wedding Dress

The wedding dress should be discreet and cover the chest, back and arms. Its purpose is to make you look your most beautiful; therefore be sure it is not awkward or uncomfortable.

The bride's dress decides the degree of formality for the rest of the wedding party and guests.

For A Large Formal Wedding In Synagogue, Hotel, Or Home:

Choose a white or off white floor length wedding dress with a train or sweep at the back. The veil may be long or short. Groom wears morning clothes (cutaway) or full dress evening clothes if wedding is in the evening.

For Less Formal Synagogue, Hotel Or Home Wedding:

The floor length or street length wedding dress of white or very light color, with short veil is correct. Groom wears Oxford jacket with grey vest and striped trousers or dark blue suit; tuxedo if in the evening.

For Informal Chapel, Hotel Or Home Wedding:

Choose a delicate pastel or white dress with a small headdress or wreath. White is not worn for a second wedding. The groom wears dark blue suit.

For The Civil Wedding By A Judge Or Justice Of The Peace:

Choose suit or day dress of any becoming color (not black) with street accessories. Groom wears business suit.

If the dress has full length sleeves, no gloves are worn. With three-quarter or short sleeve dresses, gloves that cover most of the exposed part of the arm are correct. Remember to have the ring finger of your gloves split if the glove cannot be quickly removed.

Any jewelry a bride wears should be very simple. No long dangling earrings, fancy necklace or bracelets.

Make sure your shoes are comfortable and can be worn for hours of standing if there is to be a reception.

A bride should not plan to carry anything except her bouquet or prayer book and handkerchief.

Since the bride has the say as to what other members of the wedding party should wear, the following is listed as a guide:

Father of the bride, best man, ushers, all dress like the groom.

Bridesmaids, maid of honor: If the bride's dress is silk, the attendants should wear dresses of silk, velvet or velveteen, if her dress is cotton, their dresses should be cotton, too. The style and color should complement the bride's dress. The maid or matron of honor may wear a dress identical to those of the bridesmaids, or the same dress in a different color. All should wear dresses with shoulder covering and some kind of headdress, gloves, and shoes that have been dyed to match their dresses.

Mothers of the bride and groom wear light colored lace, chiffon, silk crepe, or taffeta. At every religious ceremony the shoulders, back and head should be covered.

The Going Away Costume

Today, the going away costume is anything that is becoming, practical for the trip, and useful afterwards. Traditionally, this is the bride's good suit, with a hat, bag and gloves. It should be in a color, not black. If it is mid-summer and the couple is motoring to a nearby resort, a lightweight dress and no hat may be more appropriate.

Honeymoon Clothes And Packing Hints

Check what is worn where you are going, temperature range, possibility of rain or snow.

Take only clothes you are sure you'll need, those that will require little care and will pack easily and those with which accessories can be interchanged.

A bride is always noticed, but should not be noticed because her clothes are gaudy.

Break in any new shoes beforehand.

Have a "packing" rehearsal . . . It is most upsetting to have to re-assemble your wardrobe because it won't fit into your luggage.

The Well-Groomed Household

Study storage space in your new home, make a clear division in your husband's closet and drawer space and yours. Designate special places for your clothes and acces-

The Meaning Of "Kiddushin" In The Jewish Wedding Ceremony

in an uplifting, spiritual way. The ceremony is the central part of a wedding. It makes the difference between the holy and the profane.

"Perhaps I can explain my feelings in better language by means of a parable. I heard it a long time ago from someone else, and I can't remember who it was.

"There was an Indian prince whose beloved bride was separated from him by death. To do proper honour to her memory, the prince called in the finest architect of his principality. Together they designed a simple alabaster tomb which would do honour to his departed, dear princess. He went to the site every day and watched it as this tribute to her was being completed. When it was finished he was convinced it was the most magnificent thing he'd ever imagined. Every day he went there and called her to mind in love and loneliness.

"Then one day he noticed some slight imperfection. So he called in the finest architect in all India. He pointed to the alabaster tomb and told the architect that there was some slight imperfection which he wanted corrected. The designer created an ornate mausoleum, to be built over the simple tomb so to enhance its beauty. Construction was undertaken immediately. The prince wanted his royal feelings to be properly expressed. Finally, the work was done and the prince rejoiced. Now he could indeed pay proper homage to his separated princess. He went regularly to the enlarged memorial place to think on his memory of her.

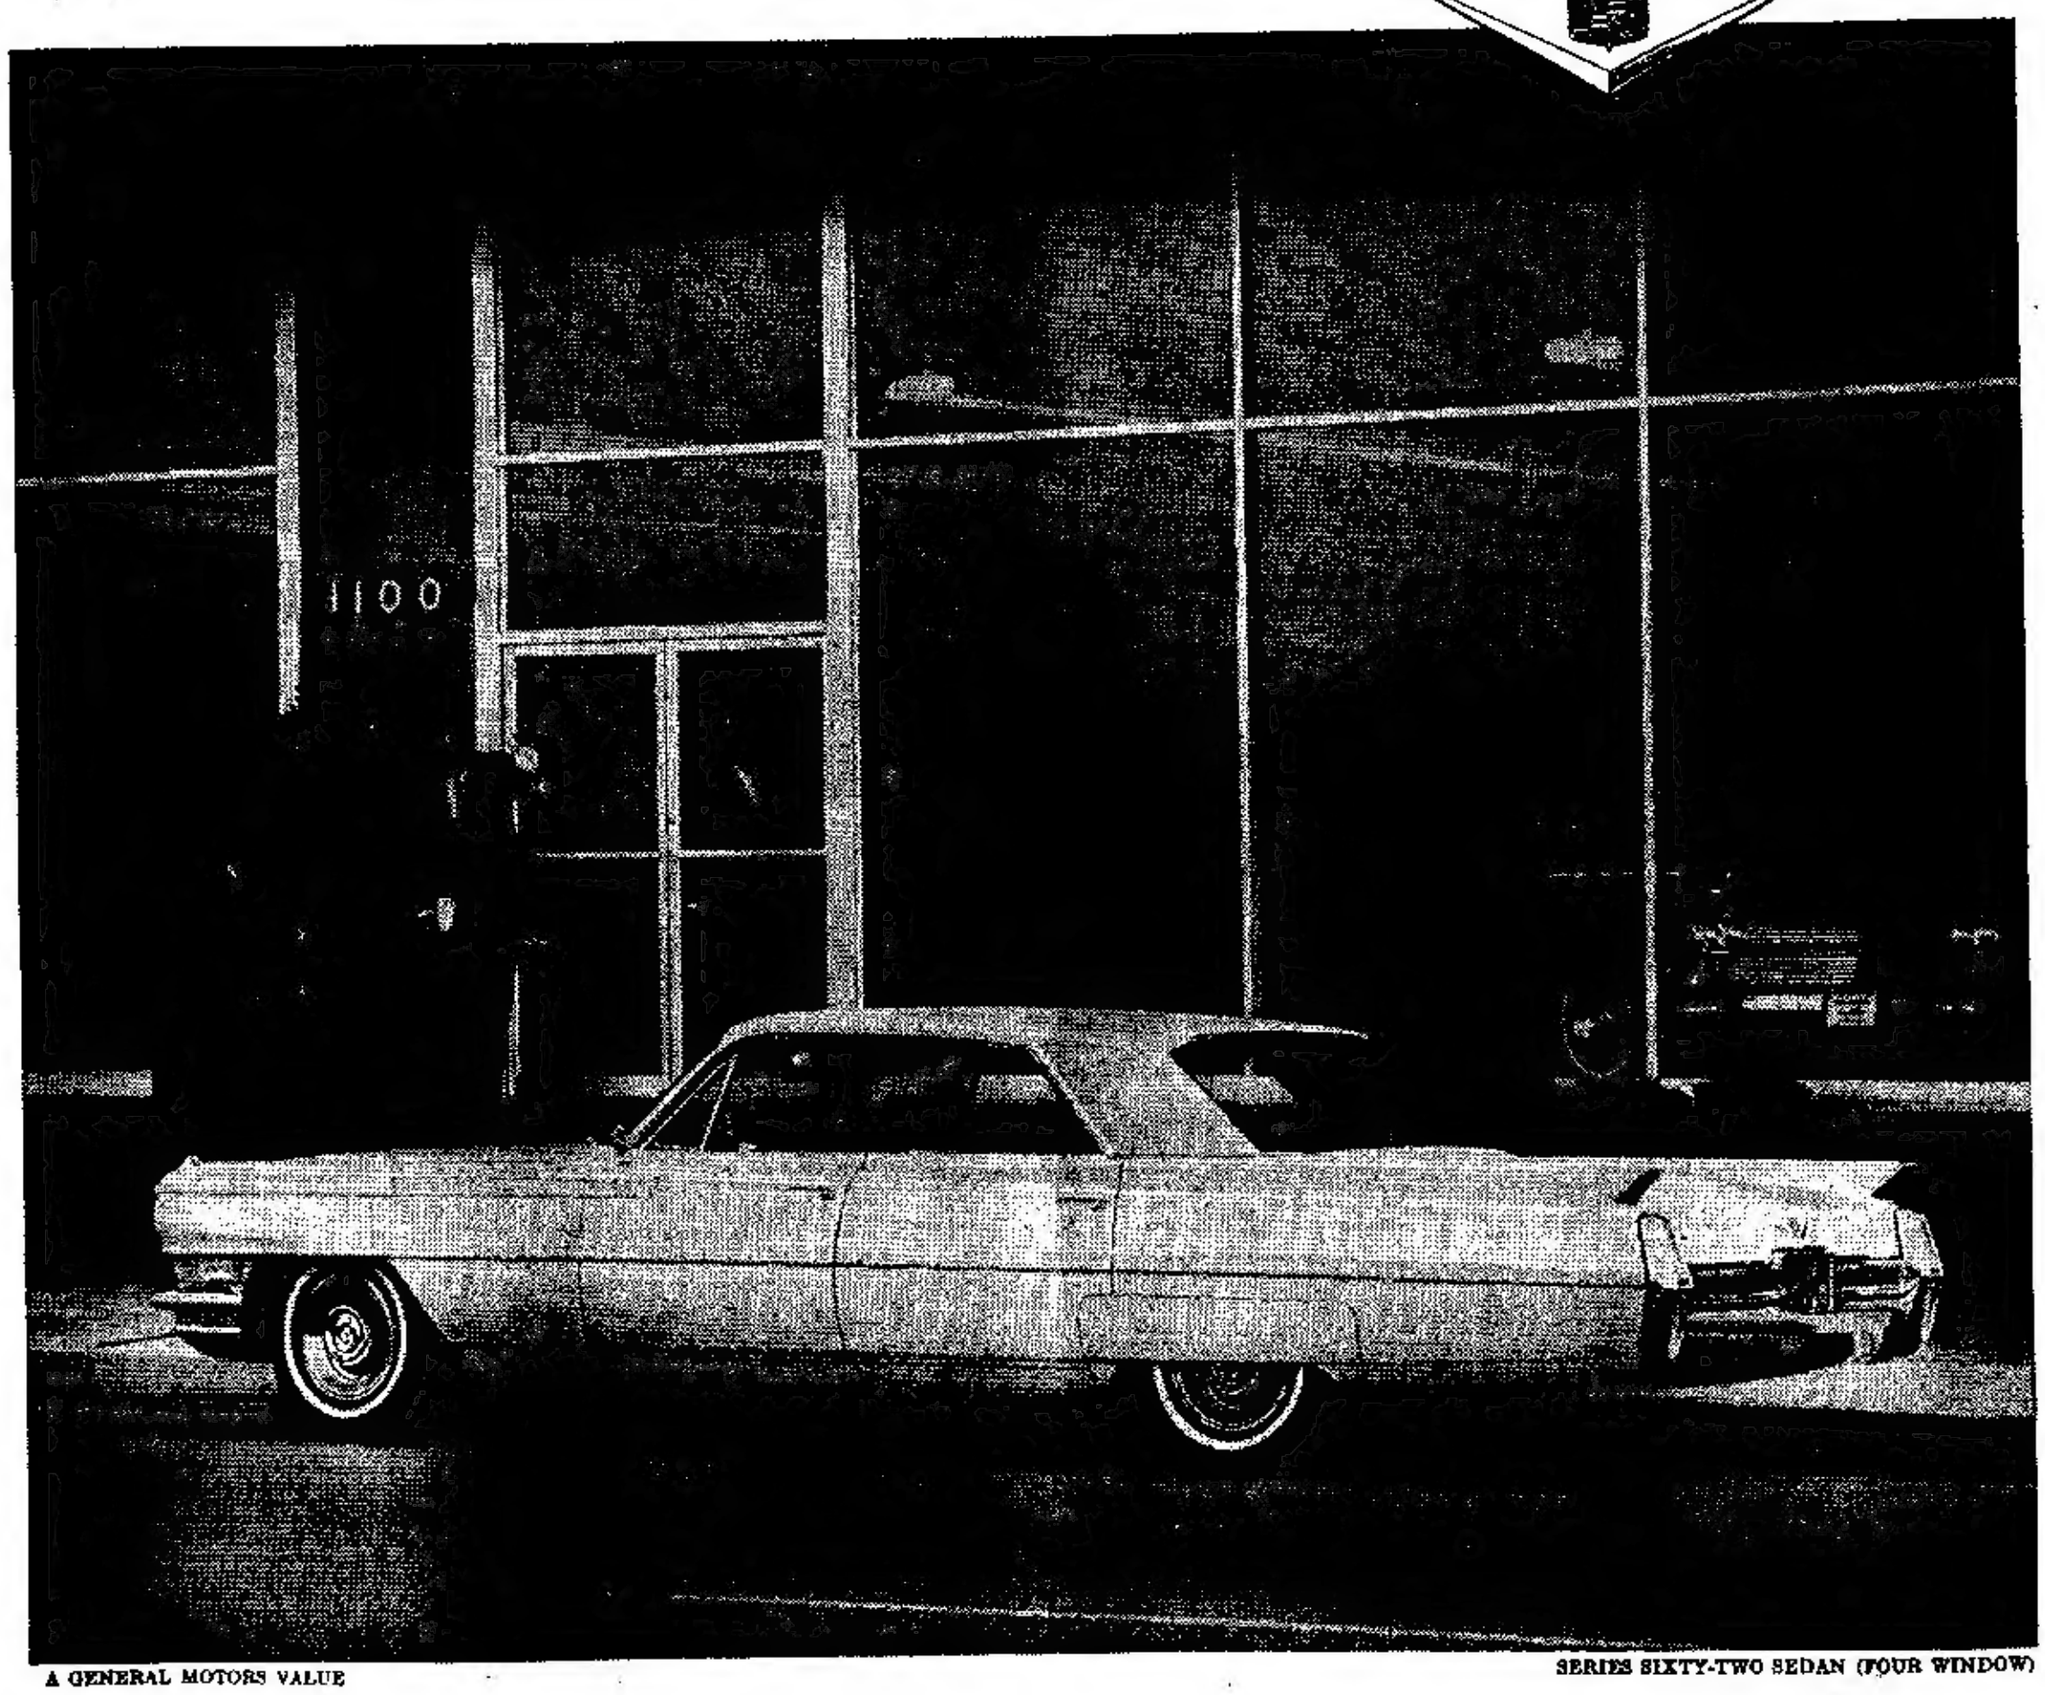
"Soon again a slight imperfection was noted. The finest architect in the world was now brought to his principality and commissioned to build a pavilion in place of the mausoleum. It was to be the largest and most grand building in the world. Only this would satisfy the prince in his love.

"Workmen were engaged and the building proceeded at a rapid pace. This enormous edifice took so much time to complete. It was so magnificent a sight that pilgrims from all over the world came to visit it. The majestic love of His Majesty had become a place of world attraction. He, too, was awe inspired by its magnificence, but felt there was still some flaw in it. So he and his architect climbed to the very rafters of the pavilion. Below them the scattering people appeared like ants crawling on the ground. In the center of the building was the original alabaster tomb. After searching and contemplating, the imperfection still pressed him. Finally he looked down and saw the alabaster tomb like a forgotten piece of luggage. Quickly he turned to the architect and, pointing to the alabaster tomb, he said, 'Remove that thing.'"

The young people understood the Rabbi's point. They remained silent. They wanted their marriage vow to be meaningful. Now, they knew what "Kiddushin" meant in their wedding. Their words would be sanctified in the beauty of holiness. They would not abandon the ceremony as a forgotten piece of luggage.

"With this ring be thou consecrated to me as my wife according to the law of God and the faith of Israel," meant something to everyone that wedding day, too. The lovers had brought their lives to flower in the presence of God and man.

Cadillac



A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

SERIES SIXTY-TWO SEDAN (FOUR WINDOW)

BEFORE THE SPEEDOMETER READS 30—HE'LL KNOW HOW NEW IT IS!

The second he touches his toe to the accelerator, his amazement will begin. For no previous Cadillac ever moved like this one!

At 10 miles an hour, the most powerful engine in Cadillac history will already be working its unmistakable magic.

By 20 that great Cadillac transmission—the newly improved Hydra-Matic or the completely new Turbo Hydra-Matic—will reveal a smooth action he's never felt in any motor car before.

And by 30 the whole splendor of this new Cadillac performance will begin to unfold. New response. New quietness. New balance and poise. New alertness.

At 40 or 50, the car will have so much added acceleration that passing will be incredibly easy—with an extra margin of safety he's never known in any other motor car.

And even at the full legal limit, this new Cadillac car will be so steady and quiet that the only sensation of motion will come from the passing scenery.

And then, he will take restful note of the other great new Cadillac virtues—the extraordinary luxury of Comfort Control* . . . the magnificent comfort of the new contoured seats . . . the marvelous roominess and convenience that come only with the "car of cars".

Want to find out yourself how new the 1964 Cadillac is? Your dealer is standing by with the keys. All he needs is you and thirty minutes.

Your Trousseau And How To Plan It

sories and his. Keep yours where they belong and encourage your husband to do the same.

Assume responsibility for your husband's appearance as well as your own. Proper care adds many dollars of wear to your clothes. Keep his and your clothes pressed, spot-cleaned, buttons sewed on, shoes shined. Be sure that the clothes your husband will need for a special occasion are ready to be worn and not out at the cleaner when he starts to put them on.

Get dressed in the morning! Time is saved and it's easier to "get up and at it." You dress for a job at the office, why not for the job of homemaking?

Never, if you can help it, let your husband or anyone else see you with your hair in curlers, you can always cover the curlers with a scarf!

Set some time aside each week for the "hidden" task of your personal grooming, clothes repair, straightening bureau drawers.

Enjoy Gloves — They Are A Part Of Every Wardrobe

Although wildly colored or printed gloves crop up periodically in fashion, authorities on etiquettes agree that they are rarely correct. The arbiters favor classic gloves in subdued shades. They wince when they are confronted with what one of them calls "weird" materials such as silver or gold lamé, fancy embroidery, or costumes in which the hat, handbag, shoes and gloves are of a matching color.

Gloves, these arbiters maintain, are part of the background. They should not be a focal point. As a result, a good glove wardrobe for street and evening wear often is organized around neutral colors — beige, grey, black, white, navy and brown.

During her early years as an etiquette writer, the late Emily Post advised women to put their gloves on before they stepped out of their homes, says the New York Times. She later conceded that there were times when gloves were not necessary.

Today, the rules are greatly relaxed, but gloves should be worn when going to a formal luncheon, dinner, reception or dance. They are de rigueur on the streets of large towns and cities. They should be worn to and from worship services.

Generally, gloves should be removed before a woman smokes, eats, drinks, puts on make-up or handles merchandise in a shop. Long, elbow-length gloves, often worn to formal dinners and dances, are treated differently. They may be left on for dancing or unbuttoned at the wrist and the finger ends tucked into the wrist opening whenever a woman smokes or drinks. They should always be completely removed when a woman sits down to dinner.

Gloves are worn when a woman shakes hands either as the hostess or guest in the receiving line at a formal reception. It is suitable to wear bracelets over long gloves, writes the New York Times, but rings should be worn under, never over, any kind of gloves.

Gloves are made in a variety of lengths. Two-button gloves are wrist-length. Four-button are bracelet-length. Eight-button come to the elbow. The longest gloves, worn with evening gowns, come within an inch or two of the shoulder. Shorter lengths usually are worn with longer sleeves and vice versa.

Very short gloves, which are young looking, are sometimes worn with sleeveless dresses in the summertime. Elbow-length gloves often are worn crushed, not full-length, to fill the space between the hand and a longer sleeve.

Color consultants favor gloves in a shade that is paler or darker than the clothes with which they are to be worn. White gloves are the late-day gloves, except in some warm climates and in some cities in the summer. Black kid gloves start in the morning and go all the way through the evening.

A general rule one fashion adviser advocates is polished leather gloves — kid or glacé — with tweeds, mohairs and lusterless fabrics.

Helena Rubinstein Suggests The Relaxing Bath For That Look Of Well-Being

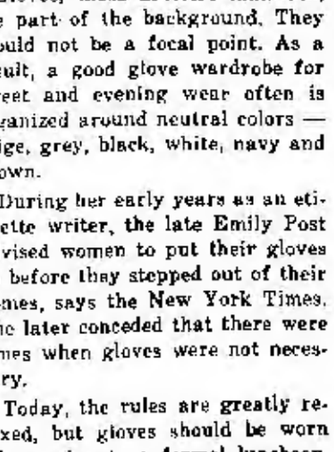
European women for years have made a bath more than a mere cleansing. To them it is a beauty treatment and a treat they wouldn't miss.

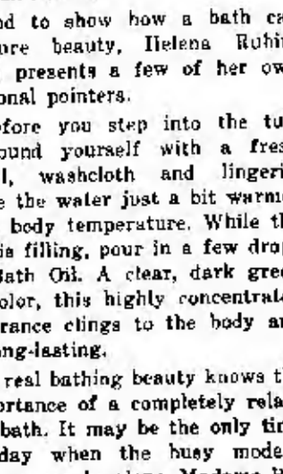
And to show how a bath can nurture beauty, Helena Rubinstein presents a few of her own personal pointers.

Before you step into the tub, surround yourself with a fresh towel, washcloth and lingerie. Have the water just a bit warmer than body temperature. While the tub is filling, pour in a few drops of Bath Oil. A clear, dark green in color, this highly concentrated fragrance clings to the body and is long-lasting.

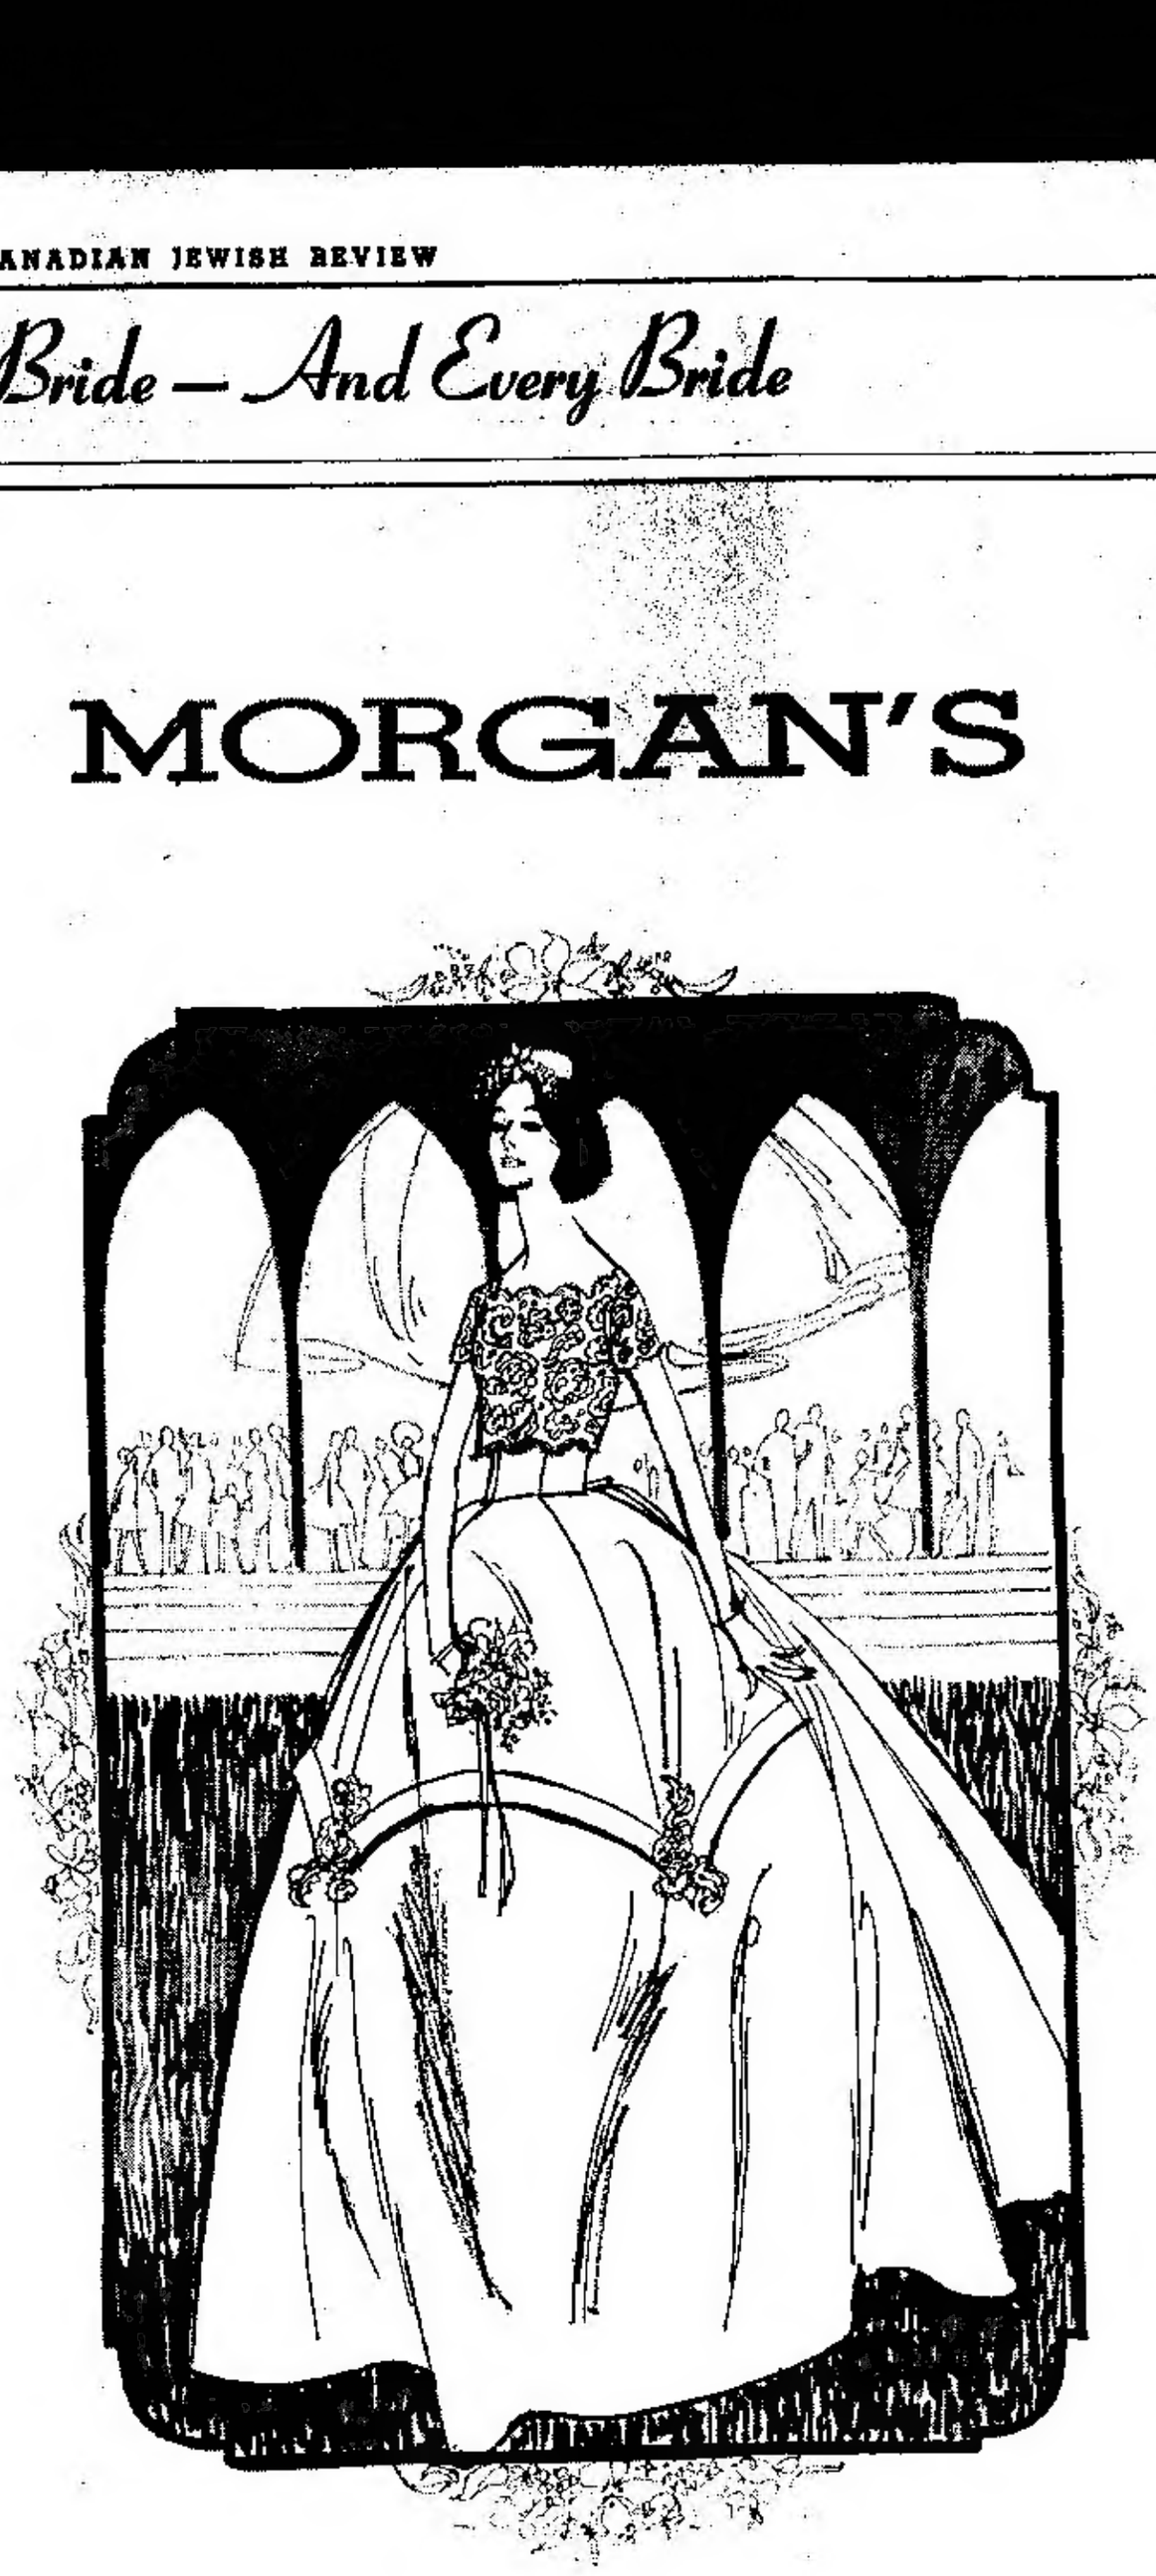
A real bathing beauty knows the importance of a completely relaxing bath. It may be the only time of day when the busy modern woman can be alone. Madame Rubinstein suggests you plan to spend at least fifteen minutes in the tub, just to soak and refresh: A quick shower cleanses, but a long bath revives you, exhilarates your spirits!

Sit up straight in the tub and start your cleansing movements slowly, but make them precise. The water makes it easy and you'll be improving your posture — and figure! When you emerge from your bath, do so slowly, taking the time to stretch again. A vigorous drying is in order.





MORGAN'S



Dreams come true

in Morgan's Bridal Salon

A lovely, lilting gown for a spring wedding or a romantic gown to make you a midsummer dream . . . the most exquisite gowns, the newest shapes and the most beautiful laces are all at Morgan's! Let our experienced staff assist you! From our summer collection: light-weight peau de soie gown in whitest white, with richly patterned Alençon lace bodice, chapel train. $125, in Morgan's Bridal Salon. Dept. 34, Fashion Floor the Second.

For The June Bride — And Every Bride

This evening gown of printed silk, featuring an off-the-shoulder bodice, long, tight sleeves and bell-shaped skirt by Lanvin of Paris was shown by Morgan's in its import collection.

Spring And Summer Fashions Are Soft And Lovely!

The softness of spring and summer fashions is being featured this year, in wedding gowns, and trousseau styles.

Audrey Morris, fashion consultant at Morgan's, introduced Morgan's import collection saying that, the gentle shaping, ruffles and pretty colors of spring fashions "will once again make women look as they should."

A sequence of costumes, dresses, coats and suits made the point that navy-blue and white are a color combination that's new again, elegant, feminine and in keeping with the soft look of current fashion, as reported in Style.

Coats in vibrant colors, frequently co-ordinated with dresses, stressed the importance of the costume idea. For the most part coats were double-breasted and offered shape without fit. Low half-belts at the back were an important fashion detail.

Suits, featured as an important item for spring, played up the significance of white as a color. Most had notch-collared jackets and skirts with trouser pleating or pockets.

Chiffon and lace, which Mrs. Morris referred to as "two of this year's very feminine fabrics" were featured in two sequences. One group showed dresses of floral printed and solid color chiffon; and the gowns of lace played up high-rising waistlines and gentle shaping.

Cotton Fabrics For The Wedding Gown Are For Every Taste, Every Season

In the heart of every bride is the desire to look her best on her wedding day.

If you are a bride-to-be, regardless of the type of wedding you may be planning, what you wear will be of great importance. Whether you plan to be married in a synagogue, with six bridesmaids, or very simply with just your best friend at your side, take care to select a bridal fashion that is becoming to you and harmonizes with the setting of your wedding.

It isn't always easy to find the dress you have dreamed of for your wedding . . . in just the right style and fabric of your choice. And twice-blessed is the bride who chooses a clever convertible style for her wedding gown — one that lives on happily ever after as a formal or a cocktail dress. These dual designs convert with the removal of a jacket or the detaching of a train.

A happy choice of fabric for your wedding fashions can be found in the fabulous collections of cottons now available, says the National Cotton Council. If you have dreamed of floating down the aisle in a soft cloud of a dress, make your selection from such gossamer fabrics as cotton chiffon, sheer georgette, or crisp cotton organdy . . . plain or embroidered. They are ideal choices for spring and summer weddings. And cotton pique with a three-dimensional weave is another fabric that is particularly appealing for this time of year.

For an autumn or winter ceremony, choose from rich cotton velveteen, lustrous cotton satin, or ribbed cotton ottoman. In using these, be sure to select a pattern with simple lines to dramatize the beauty of the fabric. Traditionally elegant cotton lace is appropriate for weddings at any time of the year.

In choosing a fabric and style, be guided by what is individually suited for you, and appropriate to the type of wedding you are planning. Choose a style to highlight and complement your facial features and figure. Short or three-quarter length sleeves are prettiest for young girls.

Brides in medieval days wore red . . . but today's prevailing color choice is white. For those who feel that stark white isn't becoming to their particular type of coloring, such off-white shades as eggshell, bridal ivory, and deep cream are available.

After selecting the fabric and pattern for your bridal gown, the next step is to decide what type of veil you will wear. Symbolic of all brides, the veil should be worn at all ceremonies whether formal or informal. It should blend with your bridal gown, both in style and color. If you choose a veil of cotton lace, be sure that your gown is simply styled.

Bridesmaids' dresses can be made from the same fabric you select for your gown or in a material of similar weight. It is important to choose styles that will go with your wedding gown, and then work within the range of available colors. Usually, brides find the most pleasing effect is achieved by having bridesmaids' dresses in the same color tones in matching styles. The honor attendant may then wear the same style or a similar design in a harmonizing color.

Your Favorite Store's Bridal Registry Will Help With The Silver Shower

Planning a silver shower is fun! Arrange to have the table of gifts under one of the new sterling-handled shower umbrellas available at jewelry and department stores; and which may be rented for a modest fee.

To complete your gift table, use a charcoal gray tablecloth as a contrast for the silver-wrapped gifts. Uniform gift wrapping in silver paper and ribbon will handsomely carry out the theme.

The hostess can do the shopping for all the guests at the store of the bride's choice, and where she has registered her sterling pattern. Gifts can be wrapped and delivered in advance, allowing the hostess ample time to decorate. A quick look at the registry will reveal what the bride does or does not have.

Sterling-shower invitations are available and should be mailed out well in advance of the party date. Another unusual way to announce the party is to send the bride a telegram forecasting showers in the vicinity of your address.

Arrange brightly colored parasols in strategic spots with each holding a clue as to the hiding spot of the treasure chest.

To make your treasure chest of gifts, line a small trunk with dark blue velveteen and cover the outside with silver foil. Include the prospective groom by addressing some of the gifts to him, such as a carving set, sterling bottle opener and other bar accessories.

New Colors, New Patterns, Are Part Of The New Look In Spring And Summer Fashions For Men

When it's too hot for a jacket, and a shirt alone gives a man a feeling of incompleteness, what does a man do? He gets a cool, cotton jac-shirt: At least that's what designers are hoping thousands of men will do this summer.

They're showing the jac-shirt which is a shirt built onto a hip band in many different versions. It will be available fashioned with front panels or detailed with contrast bands and embroidery. It will also have (in case you're wider or narrower over the hips than you suspected) adjustable side tabs or side laces.

In California where the climate lets them get to these things faster than us, seersucker is the rage. For some men striped seersucker has never been out of fashion — now they have a choice of glen plaids, tiny checks and a pattern which imitates madras.

The big fashion news for golfers is give — the kind you get from stretch denim and gabardine jackets and slacks. Airy cotton knits are also being shown for golfers in shirts and cardigans.

Suedine windbreakers are fashionable (new) and so is the embroidered shirt pocket and the Italian roll collar. Look for belts to reappear on pants (they've been absent for some time) and for jamaica shorts to replace the longer bermuda type.

Top colors for spring and summer are bone and egg-shell accessorized with bottle green, bark and brown prints. But you won't be far wrong with blue or grey accented with cranberry and wine. In any event, the trend is away from black and navy-blue. There are even fur print terry cloths, printed in leopard, ocelot and zebra patterns!

The Bride Will Find Style, Comfort And Support In Leather Shoes

It's an old — and true — saying that all brides are beautiful. But that radiance can easily dim after hours of standing and dancing on hot, tired feet.

To avoid a pinched, peaked look on the day she wants to look her loveliest, the smart bride bears this fashion note in mind: Old shoes for the bridal car, new leather shoes for the bride! Leading wedding consultants second the notion that the best bridal shoe is a simply styled, soft leather pump with mid-heel and flexible leather sole. The choice of old shoes for the wedding car they leave to the happy couple's family and friends.

Whether closed or sling-back, a mid-heel leather pump gives the bride an extra measure of self-assurance when she is hopeful of achieving a picture of perfect poise. Soft, supple leather molds to the shape of her foot, providing feather-light but firm support. If the sole is leather-lined, security is doubled, says Shoe Fashion Service of Leather Industries. Leather is porous, and both the shoe upper and the lining permit moisture evaporation and circulation of air around the foot.

Sparkling white shoes in calf, kid or matte lustre leather are, of course, most popular with brides. However, off-white, delicate pastels, subtle neutrals and glowing deeper tones are available in lovely leathers and have many advocates.

If the wedding or reception should be held in a garden, the bride and her attendants will stay flower-fresh in smart, light-weight leather shoes. Grass and dirt stains are easily wiped off, leaving the shoes ready for the next wearing.

And practically speaking — as all newly-marrieds must — leather is the perfect choice for bridal footwear. It makes a perfect addition to the bride's trousseau, and will be worn with pleasure and pride long after the Miss has become a Mrs.!

For The June Bride — And Every Bride

Tradition Dictates The Order And Conduct Of The Jewish Wedding Ceremony

Centuries of tradition form the background for the orthodox Jewish wedding, and many of these beautiful and ancient rites are included in the modern wedding ceremony.

Large formal weddings are often held in hotels, clubs or banquet halls rather than in a synagogue or temple; smaller formal weddings, in the chapel of the synagogue or in the auditorium of the synagogue house.

In accordance with the Oriental tradition of covering the face of a woman, it is customary for the bride to wear a vail, even though she wears an informal, street-length dress. She should wear long sleeves or long gloves if her dress has short sleeves. Her attendants wear headdresses, and their costumes conform to the formality or informality of the bride's gown.

All men attendants and guests are required to wear head coverings at the Orthodox or Conservative ceremony, whether it is in the synagogue or hotel, club or home. High silk hats are worn if the wedding is an elaborate one. When it is less formal, all the men wear silk skull caps, which the bride's family usually supplies and presents to the men guests as they enter for the wedding.

The families of the bridal couple are usually escorted to their reserved pews, closed off by white silken bands, before other guests are seated.

The processional for this service is: the ushers, bridesmaids, a ring bearer, the best man; then the father of the groom and the groom, with his mother on his right; then the flower girl and the maid or matron of honour. The last to enter are the bride's mother, the bride and the bride's father. Sometimes the grandparents of the bride and groom are included in the wedding procession.

There is no formal giving away of the bride. As the ceremony begins, the maid of honour is at the bride's right; the best man at the groom's left. The other attendants are outside the canopy in the usual grouping. The ceremony of the Seven Blessings proceeds.

Traditionally, no Jewish bride could be married unless she stood under the wedding canopy, or chuppah. The chuppah of today is a richly ornamented silk or white satin canopy, supported by tall velvet-covered standards. It is owned by the synagogue or is the property of the rabbi, and may be transported to the scene of the wedding if it is to be held outside the synagogue.

In a simple wedding where only the immediate family is to be present, a praying shawl, or tallith, may be used instead of the large canopy.

In a synagogue marriage the bridal pair faces toward the east and the bride stands to the right of the groom, with the maid of honour on her right. The best man stands to the left of the groom, and the other attendants stand outside the canopy in the usual order.

In the ceremony of the ring, the Rabbi gives the gold band to the groom, who places it on the index finger of the bride's right hand. The ceremony continues with the Three-fold Blessing of the High Priest, the drinking of the ceremonial cup, a benediction, and the ceremony of the Breaking of the Glass.

The wine cup ceremony is considered by most Rabbis as an integral part of the rite. A small white-covered table bearing two cups of wine is used in this part of the ceremony. Following a blessing over the wine, the Rabbi hands one of the wine cups to the groom. He sips from it and passes it in turn to the bride.

At the conclusion of the wine ceremony, the groom places the ring, usually a plain gold band, on the forefinger of the bride. After the ceremony, she changes it to her "ring," or third finger, and may even replace it with a platinum or diamond band. She should never wear her engagement ring during the ceremony.

After a short address by the Rabbi, the bride and groom drink from the second wine cup. The groom receives the glass from the Rabbi, places it on the floor and crushes it with his heel. This symbolic "shattering of the glass" by the groom is the final step in the ceremony.

The bride's family usually furnishes the wine and glasses, unless it is a small wedding in the Rabbi's study, in which case the Rabbi furnishes both the wine and the glasses.

The recessional after the ceremony is led by the bride and groom, who are followed by the bride's parents, groom's parents, flower girl or page, maid or matron of honour, bridesmaids, ushers, best man, the grandparents; and the Rabbi.

Exhibit At World's Fair Traces Jewish History From Bible Days

An exhibit illustrating the stages of evolution of Israel from illegal immigration, through the war years, in the United Nations, and the building of the Jewish state is one of the principal features of the American-Israel Pavilion at the New York World's Fair. Seven panels of historical photographs are shown by the Zionist Organization of America (ZOA) to depict "Exodus", the illegal immigration which was brought into Israel under tremendous odds; "Struggle", which provides the impact of the war for Israel's independence; Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, and Dr. Emanuel Neumann, past presidents of the ZOA, shown in their memorable appearance at the United Nations in "Decision", stating the Jewish case; David Ben-Gurion, reading the Proclamation of Israel's Independence in "Statehood"; "Ingathering" with pictures of the Yemen "Magic Carpet" and Haifa receiving immigration from many countries; "Reconstruction" and "Celebration", Israel's upbuilding: the Israel Army on parade; the ZOA House in action; the building of roads and waterworks.

Dr. Max Nussbaum, ZOA president, pointed out that the Organization is the foremost instrumentality for Israel's upbuilding and was in the very forefront of the endeavors which led to its statehood; that ZOA efforts, have helped to make possible the flow of economic aid to Israel through agricultural training in Kfar Silver, ZOA's Agricultural Training School in Israel; through Israel fund drives; immigration activity and Israel investment efforts.

The ZOA exhibit illustrates in vivid form the import of the Organization's efforts from the days before Israel's independence during the British Mandatory period to the glorious present. It is the introduction in the American-Israel Pavilion, to modern Israel, in a pictorial story which, in dramatic form, traces the history of the Jewish people from Bible days to the present.

MONTREAL MEETINGS

★ ISRAEL BOND ★

Organization: One of Canada's international policy objectives is to resolve peace in the Middle East which also recognizes Israel's right to survival, Prime Minister Pearson said at the "Man of the Year" dinner in tribute to industrialist, Allan Bronfman. Mr. Pearson said: "The gallant people of that progressive democracy have the right to survive in dignity and security, with the good-will of neighbors for whom they could do so much. This is an objective we try to achieve in our international policy." The dinner was attended by 1,200 persons. Previous winners before Allan Bronfman were former Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, Samuel Bronfman, and Sam. Steinberg. The Prime Minister pointed out that he is aware of the anxiety some have felt over the phrase the "two founding races" that appears with increased frequency in current Canadian dialogue. "This is a recognition of the historical fact that two basic language groups were at the very political foundation of Confederation. It does not mean that there are grades of citizenship in Canada. In a very real sense the partnership of today is a partnership of Canadians of every origin and racial background." He stressed that efforts to erase discrimination and prejudice must be continued in Canada. "It is our duty to act against all those who advocate, incite or insinuate such discrimination or disseminate literature for that purpose," he said. Mr. Pearson suggested that the best protection against this is "an active, alert, and informed public opinion, insisting that our laws be adequate and that they be enforced." In his address, Mr. Bronfman warned that if Israel failed or faltered "all the people who love freedom will fall and falter as well. "If we, no matter where we may reside, nurtured in the ideology that all man must be free, fail Israel now, then we do an unparalleled injustice not only to this generation but to generations yet unborn."

★ JEWISH IMMIGRANT AID ★

Services annual meeting of Canada (JIAS) was held in Montreal at the Windsor Hotel. J. Ain, president, JIAS Eastern Region, presided. Reports were submitted on immigration, social adjustment, naturalization, immigrant counselling, citizenship, education. Some 1,200 inquiries and requests for assistance regarding immigration matters were received during the year. The social services department received requests for assistance, guidance, and reception facilities from 482 newcomer families. The documentation and naturalization service of the agency assisted 381 applicants for Canadian citizenship and prepared 1,014 various documents, such as applications for passports, identity certificates, affidavits, etc. The location services of JIAS which help to locate relatives and friends in Canada and elsewhere received 571 inquiries. Care parcels in the amount of $10,373.00 were forwarded to Israel through JIAS in 1962. During spring and summer terms 1,456 students registered with the JIAS Citizenship School which is open to all newcomers and offers courses in English, French, and Canadian citizenship. JIAS open forums on Canadian life were attended by some 1,500 individuals. Projects aimed at bringing the newcomers closer to the Canadian way of life were undertaken jointly with other welfare bodies. Commenting on present day Canadian immigration laws, Dr. Joseph Kage, national executive director, said that the selective approach towards the admission of immigrants has been a distinct characteristic of Canadian immigration policy since the country's early history. Canada has been and is still, in a great measure, sustained by the immigrant. Even today, one out of six Canadian inhabitants was born outside of Canada. Dr. Kage analyzed the latest pronouncements made by various officials and expressed the view that Canada will be aiming at an annual immigration rate of about one per cent of its population, providing that favourable economic conditions continue. Referring to the present day immigration policy, Dr. Kage stated that the selective approach will have meaning only if administered in a spirit which would gear immigration to the country's economic growth potential; avoid a "depression psychology"; advance the principle of non-discrimination; be related to actual situations of groups in special need of resettlement; be determined to enhance the flow of immigration; be permeated with a humanitarian approach to human welfare. The immigrant, Dr. Kage said, should not be expected to identify with either of the two main ethnic groups. However, he stressed that in the present dialogue between the charter groups, New Canadians cannot and should not remain mere bystanders. It is their duty to participate in this dialogue as a manifestation of the basic desire that William James, so aptly called, a wholesome acceptance of one's self as part of the eclectic Canadian culture, based on the French-English heritage. In evolving this culture, "all Canadians must plod doggedly on, keeping one eye to the distant ideal, and the other on the ground, to meet the day-to-day realities of Canadian life." School Exercises were conducted by L. Orenstein, Q.C., chairman of the education committee. Several hundred students received certificates and prizes. Judge Rene Deguire, president of the Montreal Citizenship Court, and Darious Robitaille, Acting Judge and Clerk of the Court, led the audience in reciting an "Oath to Canada." Albert Eaton, national president of JIAS, presented an Award of Honour to Samuel S. Guttman for promotion of immigrant welfare in Canada. The meeting was addressed by the Minister of Citizenship and Immigration, Rene Tremblay. Delegates from various parts of Canada, local communal bodies, United HIAS Service, New York officers from the Department of Citizenship and Immigration, and United States Consular officials were among those present. Alexander Schwartz, aged seventeen years, a student of the McGill Conservatory, played a number of light violin selections. He is a native of Bucharest, Romania, and came to Canada with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Schwartz about two years ago. Alderman Philip Fainer, of Montreal, was chairman of the nominations committee; Mrs. M. Eliasoph, chairman of arrangements. Joseph Ain, was re-elected president; B. M. Bloomfield and L. Orenstein, Q.C., vice-presidents; H. Rosenfeld, appointed treasurer; H. S. Greenwood, national vice-president for the Eastern Region.

★Jewish men and women gathered at Chevra Kadisha-Bnai Jacob Synagogue to pray for the welfare of the Jews in Russia in response to a call of the All-Canadian Rabbinic Conference, held in Ottawa in January, sponsored by the national religious welfare committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress. The recurring theme was: "We know that there is no physical anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union of the Nazi type, but no one can live by bread alone and even with the utmost of comfort (which, by the way, is not the case in Russia), the Jewish community is faced with a complete disintegration if the present policy of discrimination against the Jewish nationality in the Soviet Union continues." Officiating at the services were about thirty rabbis, Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform.

CLASS IN COOKERY

two eggs
two-thirds cup sugar
one and one-half cups sifted flour
one-half cup oil
three tablespoons cold water or orange juice two tablespoons baking powder
one-quarter teaspoon salt
one teaspoon vanilla
six apples

Mix eggs and oil. Beat in sugar. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with the water or orange juice, and add vanilla. Grease eight-inch-square pan or line it with wax paper. Pour in half the batter. Spread over it the thinly sliced apples. Sprinkle with cinnamon to taste and one tablespoon of sugar. Spread remainder of batter over it. Bake at 325 degrees for glass pan, or 350 degrees for metal pan, for one hour or one hour and fifteen minutes.

Mrs. Donald Sherman,
9 Kingsbridge Court, Toronto.

The Festival of Shavuoth commences on Saturday evening, May 16

ARE YOU READY FOR SHAVUOS? YESHIVA U. CHEF OFFERS CHEESE RECIPES

Shavuos is a joyous Spring Festival on the Jewish calendar, a time of the year when many synagogues are decorated with flowers and plants as a reminder of the ancient agricultural celebrations of the Jewish people. To be observed this year on May 17 and May 18, Shavuos commemorates the giving of the Ten Commandments to the Tribes of Israel seven weeks after the first day of Passover. The food product traditionally associated with Shavuos in cheese, and Jewish families look forward to the cheese mixtures and delicacies and other dairy products served during the two-day holiday.

Alfred Parker, executive chef at Yeshiva University in New York City and one of the foremost authorities on Jewish cooking, says that Shavuos offers unlimited possibilities for the enterprising housewife and homemaker.

"There are many wonderful, tasteful dishes you can serve on Shavuos, such as cheese cake and cheese pancakes, two of my personal favorites," he observes. Here is Mr. Parker's recipe for:

CHEESE CAKE

Ingredients for Crust:
One cup of cornflakes or graham crackers
A quarter pound butter
Three tablespoons sugar
One teaspoonful cinnamon
One cup of pineapple pie filling or cherry pie filling
Ingredients for Cheese Mix:
One teaspoonful of vanilla
One pound of cream cheese
One cup of sugar
Six eggs
One cup of sour cream
One tablespoon of flour
Grated rind of one lemon
Pinch of salt

Start to make the crust by crushing the cornflakes or the crackers into small pieces. Then mix with butter, sugar, and cinnamon. Spread this out on bottom of springform pan. Add fruit filling on top. Mix egg yolks with sugar, cream cheese, sour cream, and a pinch of salt. Then add lemon, flour, and vanilla. Beat egg whites to a snow and fold into the mixture. Place the mixture on top of the food filling and bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Turn off heat. Let the cake cool by opening door of stove. Twelve portions.

Recipe for: CHEESE PANCAKES

One pound of farmer cheese
Two eggs
Two cups of matzoh meal
One-half cup of sugar
Two ounces of diluted butter
One-half teaspoonful of salt
Grated skin of one lemon
One teaspoonful of vanilla
One cup of cornflake crumbs

Grind cheese and mix with egg yolks. Add butter. Then add sugar, grated lemon, vanilla, and matzoh meal. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into the mixture. Form into pancakes and roll in cornflakes. Fry in hot vegetable shortening. Serve with sour cream or food sauce. Twelve servings.

Mr. Parker puts in a 14-hour day supervising three Yeshiva University cafeterias. He estimates that he drives 300 miles a week to oversee the preparation of 10,000 kosher meals at the three cafeterias:—Yeshiva College, and Stern College for Women, Manhattan; Albert Einstein College of Medicine, the Bronx.

He became a cook by accident. At the age of 18, he was an engineering student in his native Vienna, but was forced to flee when Austria was invaded in 1938. He went to a refugee camp in Switzerland where he helped out in the kitchens, and gradually began to cook. So well did he learn his new trade that he obtained a job in a Zorich restaurant and, from there, moved to the renowned Hotel Fachschool in Lucerne. Mr. Parker came to the United States in 1947, and stepped into his Yeshiva University role ten years later.

Yeshiva University, in New York, is America's oldest and largest university under Jewish auspices, now in its 78th year. It provides undergraduate, graduate, and professional studies in the arts, sciences and Jewish learning leading to 18 different degrees and diplomas for more than 5,500 men and women.

BAR-MITZVAHS

Saul Hyman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernhardt Pytka, 33 Burnside Drive, was called to the Reading of the Law, in honour of his bar-mitzvah, on January 18, at Shaarei Shomayim Synagogue. He is the brother of Pauline, aged eleven years; Evelyn, seven; Marilyn, three; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Wolf Pytka, 631 Dundas Street West. Kiddush was observed. A dinner reception took place the following evening at North Bathurst Talmud Torah Synagogue hall.

MARRIAGES

OFFSTEIN-JACOBSON

The marriage of Miss Sheila Jacobson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jacobson, 209 Arlington Avenue, to Bernard Offstein, son of Mrs. Ida Offstein, 109 Livingstone Avenue, and the late David Offstein, was solemnized at the Bnai Israel Beth David Synagogue, on Sunday, December 8, at half-past five o'clock, by Rabbi Albert Pappenheim. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of white, peau de soie, designed with a scoop neckline; and with three-quarter length sleeves; and the sheath skirt had a three-quarter length overskirt. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was attached to a crown of pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of orchids, white roses, and stephanotis. Mrs. Milton Barsky, sister of the bride, was matron of honour. Her gold-coloured brocaded gown, was fashioned, with a fitted bodice; and scooped neckline; and short sleeves. The bridesmaids were: Misses Rhona Jacobson, and Susan Jacobson, cousins of the bride; Nancy Offstein, cousin of the groom; and Sandra Paul. Each wore a gown of fuchsia-coloured brocade; with a V-neckline; and three quarter-length sleeves; and a full skirt. Each had a matching headpiece, with a short veil; and carried a bouquet of red carnations. Ralph Leizer was the best man. The ushers were: Bernard Grossman, and Samuel Grossman, cousins of the groom; David Jacobson, brother of the bride; Milton Barsky, brother-in-law of the bride. The decorations were bows, to mark the aisle, and standards of red and white carnations, and roses. A dinner reception was held in the Synagogue hall, with two hundred guests present. Mrs. Jacobson, mother of the bride, wore a princess gown of dusty-pink, peau de soie; styled with a scooped neckline; and cap sleeves. Mrs. Offstein, mother of the groom, was gowned in aquamarine-blue, chiffon; designed with a round neckline; and short sleeves; and a draped bodice. Each had a matching headpiece; and a corsage of orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Offstein left via Trans-Canada Air Lines, to spend their honeymoon in Antigua, W. I. The bride wore for travelling a brown and gold-coloured suit. They reside at 109 Livingstone Avenue.

A.J.C. EXPERTS REPORT ARAB LEAGUE MASSIVE CAMPAIGN

The Bonn government has told the Nasser regime such activity is against West German laws.

"Consistent" Arab activity, Mr. Shuster charged, has gone on to prevent adoption by the Second Vatican (Ecumenical) Council of a declaration of a document on Catholic-Jewish relations. "It is known in Rome," he said, "that bishops from Arab countries have been instructed by their governments to use their influence against the declaration. They have been told that the status of the church in their countries, and their status as bishops, depends on this."

Pope Paul VI and the bishops have made it clear that the document is purely religious, says the New York Herald Tribune. It is expected, Mr. Shuster said, that it will be approved — together with one on religious liberty — when the Council reconvenes in the fall.

Mr. Monk, aged thirty-two years, charged that the Arab League has opened major offices in Buenos Aires and in Rio de Janiero to spread anti-Zionist and anti-Semitic ideas among the ruling elite to mobilize Latin-American opinion in the United Nations against Israel.

Spearhead of the campaign is Hussein Triki, Arab League representative in Buenos Aires, a Tunisian who collaborated with the Nazis in North Africa in World War II.

Leaders of the American Jewish Committee said efforts had been stepped up to thwart the possible adoption by the Ecumenical Council of a statement absolving the Jewish people of guilt in the Crucifixion of Jesus, reports the New York Times. Mr. Shuster said that a 700-page anti-Semitic volume, "Complotto Contro La Cleas" ("The Plot Against the Church") was distributed at the first session of the Ecumenical Council. The book, published anonymously in Spain, has recently been translated from Italian into German, he said, and is being circulated among German and Austrian Bishops. The distribution of anti-Semitic literature is barred by German law.

Another pamphlet now being circulated, Mr. Shuster said, is "Jews in the Light of the Catholic Tradition," based on so-called theological grounds against Judaism. The author is listed as a "Bernardus."

In summation, Ralph Friedman, chairman of the executive board of the American Jewish Committee, saw "cause for serious concern" in the following developments:

An "accelerated campaign" by the Arab League in South America, "backed by unlimited funds and carried out with top level propaganda skill, which is fomenting a massive campaign of hatred not only against Israel but also of a general anti-Jewish character."

The growth of "an 'anti-Semitic publication network,' which has made significant gains during the past year with the appearance of new neo-Nazi anti-Semitic publications in Western Germany, France, and Spain."

Mr. Friedman said, for example, that in Western Germany, the Deutsche National Zeitung und Soldaten Zeitung had consolidated its position as a leading neo-Nazi publication and had taken over two extremist papers, reports the New York Times. In France, he said, the magazine Europe Action was established in the last year "with the obvious blessing and cooperation of most of France's anti-Semitic and extremist organizations."

The Meaning Of "Kiddushin" In The Jewish Wedding Ceremony

By Rabbi H. Leonard Poller, of Temple Beth Sholom, in Montreal

They were deeply in love! She couldn't have been more happy. His heart overflowed with joy. Everyone remarked how love radiated as they went together. They were an inspiration to watch. The flowers of love bloomed all around them. At last their wedding date was set. Everything was to be done to bring them to the altar of marriage. A wedding would be held which would be worthy of their outstanding qualities.

The parents gathered to plan the event. Everything had to be just right. No flaws were allowed. Their experiences at so many weddings would allow them to do the very best for the betrothed couple. First the facilities of the Synagogue had to be engaged. How could a nuptial ceremony of this magnitude be held in a place other than the hallowed halls of a sanctuary wherein God's presence dwelt?

And a florist was hired to decorate the place properly. The fragrant scent of nature's glory would be an appropriate blend to their children's sweetness. Many flowers would be necessary. The rich perfume would permeate the sanctuary. The Chuppah would be a mosaic of petals of roses. Bouquets for a large bridal party would be full. The most beautiful flowers of the garden would grace every table. Nothing of floral array would be wanting.

The caterer had to be the finest. The delicacies of his cuisine would satiate the palate of the gourmet. His creative culinary artistic skill would be employed without reservation. After all, the family and friends who would be gathered deserved such treatment.

And the orchestra would be the city's most musical. Music and dancing rejoice the heart. Everybody should be able to gayly sing and dance in the merriment of the happy occasion. And a photographer! The most skilled would certainly have to be commissioned. This wedding would be one never to be forgotten and a good photographer would catch every important movement and personality.

Invitations would be extended to all the friends and family. The finest engraver would print the invitations. Nobody would be excluded from witnessing the wedding. Everybody would be welcomed. The hall was big enough to accommodate a large group. The children should have all their dear ones and friends as witnesses to their marriage.

And everything seemed so in order. Now all that was left to do was to speak to the Rabbi and make sure that he would take care of the necessary legalities. He had known that plans were under way. The couple had to come to him for the usual pre-marriage counselling. He had insisted on this. Since marriage is so important a part of an individual's life, the Rabbi felt they should understand some of the Jewish values associated with marriage. The young people agreed this was a good idea.

Everybody was elated at the thought of his guidance. Whatever the children would benefit from seemed satisfactory. Since the couple was going to be with him, would they ask him to be sure to keep the ceremony short? You know, all the folks would be waiting to celebrate, and the ceremony can become so time-consuming.

Perhaps he could shorten his address to the couple and be certain the Cantor wouldn't take too long in singing the "Shevah B'rachot". Also, the reading of the marriage contract was so uninteresting. Perhaps this could be eliminated? "We don't want any imperfections," they counselled.

So they came to the Rabbi. He, too, was happy for them. They were so fit for one another and reflected the love and affection necessary for happiness. Both had come from good homes and knew the value of Jewish family life. They had shared values in common. Their interests were so similar. Their desires in life were so wholesome and meaningful. Their relationship with one another had been exemplary. The Rabbi, too, wanted a meaningful wedding for them.

He explored the ideals of marriage with them and explained the service and what their part would be in it. Each of the symbols was defined: the wine cup, symbolizing the cup of life; the ring, with its unending circle, symbolizing the unending quality of love; the presence of God in the home as a building force for life, and the symbol of the Chuppah which represented His presence; the breaking of the glass which reminds us that even at the moment of greatest joy we should not be unconscious of the existence of sorrow and privation. The session together was fruitful and beneficial.

Just before leaving the Rabbi's office, the couple imparted their parents' words about keeping the ceremony short. They didn't want to offend him, to be sure, but they wanted the Rabbi to know how much their wedding meant to them. He was an understanding person and so he wouldn't mind their suggestions about the short ceremony.

The Rabbi realized something was happening which was disturbing. He, too, was mindful of the beauty associated with marriage, and reminded the couple that the Jewish wedding ceremony is known as "Kiddushin", a "Sanctification".

"Sanctification", he said, means setting something apart as holy. It is a unique and magnificent experience. It's the enactment of the ideal of two people uniting their lives together. It brings them in union with the understanding that they will maintain their individual integrity. It binds their hearts together

ARGENTINA JEWS DEEPLY CONCERNED DESPITE GOVERNMENT PLEDGE AGAINST NEO-NAZIS

Governmental denunciation of neo-Nazism and Jewish community dismay over the failure of democratic elements to denounce neo-Nazi organizations were featured in two recent statements in Argentina that have been received by World Jewish Congress headquarters in New York.

The denunciation came from Argentina's vice-president, Carlos H. Perette, in the course of a message to the DAIA, the central representative body of Argentinian Jewry, on the occasion of the twenty-first anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising. Vice-President Perette said: "There cannot be, nor will there be a resurgence of the hateful totalitarian regimes, no matter what their program or political coloring."

The second statement came from the DAIA, in a special declaration following a recent nationwide meeting of representatives of all Jewish communities. The DAIA, which is affiliated with the World Jewish Congress, said: "We are worried over the presence of neo-Nazi elements in the midst of some governmental bodies. It is a matter of urgency that Argentinian democracy become aware of the danger."

The DAIA's six-point statement followed recent anti-Semitic incidents which, the representative Jewish body stated, had "opened the public's eyes to the true character of terrorist groups masking their criminal activity behind different ideological fronts. The greatest danger lies in minimizing the events and the problems they represent." The statement by the DAIA went on to express satisfaction at the firm stand taken by the Government and the swift and effective work of the police.

But the Jewish organization expressed its concern over the presence, as confirmed by the Minister of National Defense, of subversive elements in the heart of certain official bodies. The penetration of such elements into important sectors of public life and into so-called key installations "is taking place simultaneously and with the purpose of gaining control of them," the DAIA declared.

Noting similar developments throughout the continent, the DAIA charged that "these Nazi elements seek to provoke disturbances leading to general chaos, which is the first step towards annihilation of our republican and democratic institutions."

It was a matter of urgent concern that democratic elements should awaken to the danger facing them. "The DAIA is compelled to raise its voice in warning," the central Jewish body stated. "It is not a problem affecting only part of our population nor do we seek protection for just part of the population. Something much more basic is at stake, at the highest national level. There must be full and drastic measures taken to fight this menace now. Democracy must choose between the complete destruction of all enemies threatening human dignity, or else human dignity and democracy itself will disappear in our land."

Vice-President Perette's message to the DAIA paid tribute to the Warsaw Ghetto fighters as "a handful of Jewish heroes who opposed the evil forces of totalitarianism and who elected to die rather than surrender."

After naming some of the Warsaw Ghetto fighters as men "worthy of a place amongst heroes of all times who fight for freedom," the Vice-President of Argentina stated that: "There could not be nor will there be a resurgence of the hateful totalitarian regimes, no matter what their program, or political coloring." He added that an end must be put to oppression and discrimination on grounds of race, creed, color, or ideology, and: "Those who try to revive the abortive attempts of Nazism would fail, whether in Argentina or anywhere else in the world. We are not afraid, nor shall we submit to any kind of totalitarianism. All we want is the triumph of democracy and liberty, with equality and security for all peoples."

The vice-president ended his message with an appeal to "Argentinian Jewry, which has made such great contributions to our country, to continue to work alongside their fellow citizens so that Argentina might live in peace and in progress. The country needs all its peoples to develop a life free from hate and intolerance."

Vienna Jewry Urges Extension Of Statute Of Limitations For Nazi Crimes

The Vienna Jewish community, affiliated with the World Jewish Congress, has appealed to the Austrian Government for revision of the Statute of Limitations in order to ensure prosecution of Nazi criminals.

The appeal was sent to the Austrian Minister of Justice, Dr. Christian Broda, by Dr. E. Feldsberg and W. Krell, president and secretary-general, respectively, of the Vienna Jewish Community Council.

The Austrian Jewish leaders, noting that the world "spotlight is presently focussing on" the trials of Nazis in Germany, stated that there are several such investigations in process in Austria, possibly revealing many new criminals. But, the Jewish leaders added: "This is endangered by the fact that the prosecution of such persons will be made impossible once the Statute of Limitations comes into force on June 25, 1965. It is our conviction that new legislation is needed declaring such crimes as were committed in the framework of Nazi persecution as being outside any statute of limitations, or at least extending the deadline for another twenty years.

Declaring that there is no valid reason why the "criminals responsible for such a monstrous crime as the final solution of the Jewish question should be free from prosecution as of June, 1965, the Vienna community emphasized that Austrian lawmakers were aware of the special character of the Nazi crimes and of the difficulties in tracing and apprehending the criminals. The extent and seriousness of the Nazi crimes placed them beyond any normal frame of criminal legislation, and the community felt that an appropriate amendment was urgently required.

Where do you want to go this summer?

TCA's new low fares offer you all Europe!

Where will it be... Madrid... Rome... Copenhagen... Tel Aviv? Who can resist the wanderlust when fares are so reduced? TCA can take you to – London, Paris, Dusseldorf, Zurich, Vienna, and Shannon–gateways to fascinating Europe. TCA's new low 14-to-21 Day Jet Economy Excursion fares are up to $208 less than last year's regular economy fares.

Your TCA travel agent or TCA nearest office will welcome the opportunity to give you all the details. They'll also arrange your round trip flight to any destination. This summer TCA's daily jets to London (with BOAC), and Paris, fly you directly to two convenient connecting points for all of Europe and the Middle East.

If you want to go directly to Tel Aviv: you can still see Europe on free "Extra Cities" stop-overs on your way back, it's all in the round-trip ticket. Ask your travel agent. Ask him, too, about TCA's Economy Class Group Fares to Tel Aviv. Applicable all year 'round. Any group of 40 persons can apply. (Group Fare from Toronto, $683.30, from Montreal, $643.30.)

For all details on TCA's summer fares and summer flights, see your travel agent or call TCA: in Montreal 489-3411 and in Toronto 925-2311.

*By connecting airline in Europe. All fares shown are 14-21 day economy fares.
